A guide to the bodhisattva way of life (Bodhicaryavatara) by Santideva

Translated from the Sanskrit and Tibetan
By Vesna A. Wallace and B. Alan Wallace

The whole text is composed of 10 chapters of varying number of verses; plus a preface and an introduction.

Sub-section titles are in the form: L#: [...]. These can be used to regenerate the structure using a Word Processor.

Paragraph starting with '¢(i.e. ...' are usually added comments by me.
L1: [CONTENTS]

L1: [CONTENTS] .......................................................................................................................... 2

L1: [SHORT TABLE OF CONTENTS] ............................................................................................. 8

L1: [Section: Preface] .................................................................................................................. 9

L1: [Section: Introduction] ......................................................................................................... 10
  L2: [A Brief Biography of Santideva] ......................................................................................... 10
  L2: [Contextualization of the Bodhicaryavatara] ................................................................. 11

L1: [CHAPTER I – The Benefit of the Spirit of Awakening] .................................................... 13
  L2: [331 – The preliminary explanation – 7 to 10] ................................................................. 13
  L2: [332 – The actual explanation of the stages of the path to enlightenment – 11 to 291] .... 13
  L3: [332.1 The exhortation to grasp the significance of this precious human existence - 12] ........ 13
  L3: [332.2 The method to make this perfect human existence meaningful – 13 to 291] .......... 13
  L4: [332.21 The contemplation of the benefits of bodhicitta – 14 to 21] .................................. 13
  L5: [332.211 An explanation of the benefits of bodhicitta - 15] .................................................... 13
      L6: [a. The conquest of all great evils:] ..................................................................................... 13
      L6: [b. The attainment of the most sublime happiness] ............................................................ 13
      L6: [c. Wish-fulfillment] ......................................................................................................... 13
      L6: [d. Bodhicitta carries with it a special name and meaning] .............................................. 14
      L6: [e. Transformation of the interior into the supreme] ......................................................... 14
      L6: [f. The value of the precious bodhicitta, so difficult to find] .......................................... 14
      L6: [g. The inexhaustible and increasing fruits of bodhicitta] .............................................. 14
      L6: [h. The power of protection from great fear] .................................................................... 14
      L6: [i. The swift and easy destruction of great evil] ............................................................... 14
      L6: [j. Scriptural citations of the benefits of bodhicitta] ........................................................ 14
  L5: [332.212 Recognition of Bodhicitta – 16 to 19] ................................................................. 14
      L6: [332.212.1 Divisions of Bodhicitta - 17] ......................................................................... 14
      L6: [332.212.2 Benefits of the aspiring mind of bodhicitta - 18] ............................................. 14
      L6: [332.212.3 Benefits of the engaging mind of bodhicitta - 19] ........................................... 15
  L5: [332.213 The reasons for the benefits of bodhicitta - 20] ............................................... 15
  L5: [332.214 Praise to the one who gives birth to the bodhicitta - 21] .................................... 15

L1: [CHAPTER II – The Confession of Sin] ................................................................................. 17
  L2: [332.221.11 The preliminary limbs of practice – 25 to 40] .................................................. 17
      L3: [332.221.111 Offering – 26 to 33] ..................................................................................... 17
      L3: [332.221.112 Prostrations - 34] ....................................................................................... 18
      L3: [332.221.113 Going for refuge – 35 to 40] ................................................................. 18
  L2: [332.221.12 The declaration of non-virtue – the four powers – 41 to 45] ......................... 18
      L3: [332.221.121 The power of regret - 42] ......................................................................... 18
      L3: [332.221.122 The power of reliance - 43] ..................................................................... 20
      L3: [332.221.123 The power of the opponent force - 44] ................................................. 20
      L3: [332.221.124 The power of the promise - 45] ................................................................. 21

L1: [CHAPTER III – Adopting the Spirit of Awakening] ......................................................... 21
  L2: [332.221.21 The preparatory practice for accumulating merit – 47 to 56] ...................... 21
      L3: [332.221.211 Rejoicing in virtue - 48] .............................................................................. 21
      L3: [332.221.212 Requesting the Buddhas to turn the wheel of dharma - 49] ..................... 22
L1: [CHAPTER IV – Attending to the Spirit of Awakening] ................................................................. 25
L2: [332.222.11 A brief description of conscientiousness - 67] ......................................................... 25
L2: [332.222.12 Extensive explanation of conscientiousness – 68 to 96] ........................................ 25
L3: [332.222.121 Meditating on conscientiousness with respect to bodhicitta – 69 to 74] .......... 25
L3: [332.222.122 Meditating on conscientiousness with respect to precepts – 75 to 96] ............... 26
L4: [332.222.122.1 Conscientiousness in abandoning non-virtue - 76] ........................................... 26
L4: [332.222.122.2 Conscientiousness in meditating upon virtue – 77 to 83] ............................ 26
L4: [332.222.122.3 Conscientiousness in abandoning delusion – 84 to 96] ................................. 27
L2: [332.222.13 Summary - 97] ...................................................................................................... 28

L1: [CHAPTER V – Guarding Introspection (moral discipline (2))] .............................................. 29
L2: [332.222.21 The method of guarding the practice is to guard the mind - 99] ......................... 29
L2: [332.222.22 The method of guarding the mind is to practice mindfulness and alertness – 100 to 106] ......................................................................................................................... 30
L2: [332.222.23 How to practice moral discipline by means of mindfulness and alertness – 107 to 115] ................................................................................................................................. 31
L2: [332.222.24 How to keep one’s own practice from degenerating - 116]................................. 35
L2: [332.222.25 Conclusion: following the meaning and not merely the words of the practice - 117] ............................................................................................................................................... 35

L1: [CHAPTER VI – The Perfection of Patience (3)] ...................................................................... 37
L2: [332.222.311 The method of meditating on patience – 120 to 122] ................................. 37
L3: [332.222.311.1 The faults of anger - 121] ..................................................................................... 37
L3: [332.222.311.2 The benefits of patience - 122] .......................................................................... 37
L2: [332.222.312 The method of practicing patience – 123 to 138] .................................. 37
L3: [332.222.312.1 Preventing the cause of anger (discontent, frustration) - 124] .................... 37
L3: [332.222.312.2 Meditating on the patience of voluntarily enduring one’s suffering - 125] ........ 38
L3: [332.222.312.3 Meditating on the patience of definitively thinking about the dharma (cause & effect, emptiness) – 126 to 133] .............................................................................. 38
L3: [332.222.312.4 Meditating on the patience of not retaliating (having compassion) – 134 to 137] .... 39
L4: [332.222.312.41 Reflecting with attention upon the methods for developing compassion - 135] .... 39
L4: [332.222.312.42 Overcoming the cause of anger - 136] ........................................................... 39
L4: [332.222.312.43 When undesirable situations arise, contemplating one’s own fault - 137] ....... 40
L3: [332.222.312.5 An extensive explanation of the benefits of patience - 138] ............................. 45

L1: [CHAPTER VII – The Perfection of Zeal (4)] ........................................................................... 46
L2: [332.222.321 Exhortation to practice effort - 140] ................................................................. 46
L2: [332.222.322 Recognizing effort - 141] ..................................................................................... 46
L2: [332.222.323 Eliminating the opponent of effort (laziness) – 142 to 150] .............................. 46
L2: [332.222.324 Increasing the force of effort - 151 to 159] ......................................................... 48
L3: [332.222.324.1 Recognizing the four powers that increase the force of effort - 152] ............... 48
L3: [332.222.324.2 An extensive explanation of the four powers – 153 to 157] ......................... 48
L4: [332.222.324.21 The power of aspiration - 154] ......................................................................... 48
Shantideva’s Bodhicaryavatara

L1: [CHAPTER VIII – The Perfection of Meditation (5)] ...................................................... 52
L2: [332.222.331 Reasons for attaining tranquil abiding - 161] .................................................. 52
L2: [332.222.332 Exhortation to abandon the opponents to tranquil abiding - 162] ................. 52
L2: [332.222.333 How to abandon the opponents to tranquil abiding (physical and mental solitude) – 163 to 171] ...................................................................................................................... 52
L3: [332.222.331.1 Recognizing the causes of one’s attachment to worldly life (seeking physical solitude) - 164] .................................................................................................................................................................................. 52
L3: [332.222.331.2 Recognizing the opponent to one’s attachment to worldly life - 165] ................. 52
L3: [332.222.331.3 How to cultivate the opponent to attachment – 166 to 168] .................................. 52
L4: [332.222.331.31 Abandoning attachment to sentient beings - 167] .............................................. 52
L4: [332.222.331.32 Abandoning attachment to inanimate objects - 168] ........................................... 53
L3: [332.222.333.4 Disadvantages and faults of worldly amusements - 169] ................................. 53
L3: [332.222.333.5 Benefits of seeking solitude - 170] ........................................................................... 54
L3: [332.222.333.6 How to abandon the wild disturbances that pervert the mind (seeking mental solitude; first fighting sensuous and material desires) - 171] .......................................................................................................... 54
L4: [332.222.334 How to exchange self and others – 172 to 198] .................................................. 58
L5: [332.222.334.211 Brief explanation of the meditation - 180] .................................................... 58
L5: [332.222.334.212 The meaning of the equality of self and others - 181] ....................................... 59
L5: [332.222.334.213 The actual meditation of the equality of self and others - 182] ...................... 59
L5: [332.222.334.214 The benefits of meditating on the equality of self and others - 183] ............... 60
L5: [332.222.334.215 ( Habituation ) The ability to develop the mind in terms of this meditation - 184] ................................................................................................................................. 60
L4: [332.222.334.21 How to meditate on the equality of self and others – 179 to 184] .................... 58
L5: [332.222.334.221 Brief explanation of the exchange – 186] ...................................................... 61
L5: [332.222.334.222 The manner of the exchange – 187 to 191] ..................................................... 61
L6: [332.222.334.222.1 Gaining familiarity with the attitude of cherishing others - 188] .............. 61
L6: [332.222.334.222.2 Abandoning the self-cherishing attitude - 189] ............................................. 61
L6: [332.222.334.222.3 Reflecting on the disadvantages of self-cherishing and on the advantages of cherishing others - 190] ............................................................... 61
L6: [332.222.334.222.4 Summary - 191] ................................................................................... 62
L5: [332.222.334.223 Completing the exchange by means of reflection (putting ourselves into someone else’s shoes) – 192 to 197] ......................................................................................... 63
L6: [332.222.334.223.1 Brief explanation - 193] .............................................................................. 63
L6: [332.222.334.223.2 Meditation on jealousy towards a superior - 194] ....................................... 63
L6: [332.222.334.223.3 Meditation on competitiveness towards an equal - 195] ............................ 63
L6: [332.222.334.223.4 Meditation on haughtiness towards an inferior - 196] ................................. 63
L6: [332.222.334.223.5 Fruit of this meditation - 197] ....................................................................... 64
L5: [332.222.334.224 Completing the exchange by means of action - 198] ...................................... 64
L1: [CHAPTER IX – The Perfection of Wisdom (6)] ................................................................. 67

L2: [332.222.341 Showing why those who which to attain liberation need to develop the wisdom that understands emptiness (Renunciation, moral discipline, bodhicitta, concentration are all prerequisites in order to develop Wisdom is the only true final antidote ) - 200] .................................................................................................................................................. 67

L2: [332.222.342 The presentation of the Two Truths (Why we need the two truths together all the time. The Middle Way, away from all extremes. Why dependent origination alone, as taught in the Hinayana, is not enough. Or why emptiness alone is not enough. Or why everything is from the mind alone is not enough.) – 201 to 215] ................................................. 67

L3: [332.222.342.1 The distinctions between the two truths - 202] .............................................................................................................. 67
L3: [332.222.342.2 The definition of the two truths - 203] ........................................................................................................................... 67
L3: [332.222.342.3 The distinction between the individuals who determine the presentation of the two truths - 204] .................................................................................................................. .................................... 67
L3: [332.222.342.4 The distinction in their varying degrees of mental capacity - 205] .............................................................................................................. 67
L3: [332.222.342.5 Refutation of the argument that is not (Why it is) necessary to realize emptiness in order to attain liberation (from the two extremes of realism and idealism who take only one side or the other of the two inseparable truths) – 206 to 215] .............................................................................................................. 67
L4: [332.222.342.51 A general refutation of (Why the Realist position (is not enough) (ordinary realist people who think emptiness would be in contradiction to the observed reality and its functionality; or Yogacarin who think only the fundamental mind and its seeds are real) - 207] .................................................. 67
L4: [332.222.342.52 A specific refutation of (Why) the Chittamatra position (is not enough) – 208 to 215] ........................................................................................................................... ................................... 68
L5: [332.222.342.521 Refutation of self-cognizers by scriptural authority - 209] .............................................................................................................. 68
L5: [332.222.342.522 Refutation by logical reasoning - 210] .................................................................................................................. .................................... 68
L5: [332.222.342.523 Refutation of the Chittamatrin’s proofs for the existence of a self-cognizers - 211] .............................................................................................................. 69
L5: [332.222.342.524 Refutation of the assertion that all imputed-existents must have as their basis something truly existent – 212 to 215] .............................................................................................................. 69
L6: [332.222.342.524.1 The reason why a magician can have desire for the illusory woman he manifests ( habituation, unwholesome karma ) - 213] .............................................................................................................. 69
L6: [332.222.342.524.2 The reason why meditation upon emptiness can abandon all delusions together with their imprints ( habituation, wholesome / liberating karma ) - 214] .............................................................................................................. 70
L6: [332.222.342.524.3 Excellent results are forthcoming from the abandonment of grasping at true existence and its imprints - 215] .............................................................................................................. 70

L2: [332.222.343 Showing the reasons why those who only seek self-liberation (Hinayanists) need to develop the wisdom of understanding emptiness - 216] .............................................................................................................. 70

L2: [332.222.344  An extensive explanation of the logical reasonings that establish emptiness  – 217 to 265] .............................................................................................................. 71
L3: [332.222.344.1 An extensive explanation of the logical reasonings that establish the selflessness of persons – 218 to 223] .............................................................................................................. 71
L4: [332.222.344.11 Refutation of the conceived object of the innate self-grasping of persons - 219] .............................................................................................................. 71
L4: [332.222.344.12 Refutation of the conceived object of the intellectually formed self-grasping of persons – 220 to 222] .............................................................................................................. 72
L5: [332.222.344.121 Refutation of the permanent self postulated by the Samkhya School - 221] .............................................................................................................. 72
L5: [332.222.344.122 Refutation of the permanent self postulated by the Vaisheshika and Naiyayika schools - 222] .............................................................................................................. 72
L4: [332.222.344.13 Refuting arguments concerning the above refutations - 223] .............................................................................................................. 72
L3: [332.222.344.2 An extensive explanation of the logical reasonings that establish the selflessness of phenomena – 224 to 265] .............................................................................................................. 73
L4: [332.222.344.21 Understanding the selflessness of phenomena by means of the four close placements of mindfulness (state analysis) – 225 to 245]................................................................................................. 73
L5: [332.222.344.211 Close placement of mindfulness on the body (whole vs parts) – 226 to 230]....73
L6: [332.222.344.211.1 Establishing the non-true existence of the body as the possessor of its parts - 227]................................................................................................................................. 73
L6: [332.222.344.211.2 Establishing the non-true existence of the limbs of the body - 228].............74
L6: [332.222.344.211.3 It is inappropriate to be attached to this dream-like, non-truly existent body - 229]......................................................................................................................... 74
L6: [332.222.344.211.4 Thereby establishing the non-true existence of the person - 230].................74
L5: [332.222.344.212 Close placement of mindfulness on the feelings – 231 to 241]......................74
L6: [332.222.344.212.1 Refuting the true existence of the nature of feeling – 232 to 235]..............74
L7: [332.222.344.212.11 Refuting the true existence of painful feelings - 233]...............................74
L7: [332.222.344.212.12 Refuting the true existence of pleasurable feelings - 234].....................74
L7: [332.222.344.212.13 Explaining the yoga necessary for meditating upon the non-true existence of feelings - 235].................................................................................................................................... 74
L6: [332.222.344.212.2 Refuting the true existence of the cause of feeling – 236 to 239]..............74
L7: [332.222.344.212.21 Refuting a truly existent meeting between the sense power and the object - 237]............................................................................................................................................. 74
L7: [332.222.344.212.22 Refuting a truly existent meeting between the object and consciousness - 238].................................................................................................................................................. 74
L7: [332.222.344.212.23 Thus establishing the non-true existence of the contact that arises from the meeting of the object, sense power and consciousness - 239].................................................... 75
L6: [332.222.344.212.3 Refuting the true existence of the object of feeling - 240].............................75
L6: [332.222.344.212.4 Refuting the true existence of the subjective experiencer of feeling - 241]....75
L5: [332.222.344.213 Close placement of mindfulness on the mind – 242 to 244]..........................75
L6: [332.222.344.213.1 Establishing the non-true existence of mental consciousness - 243]..........75
L6: [332.222.344.213.2 Establishing the non-true existence of the five sense consciousnesses - 244]..................75
L6: [332.222.344.213.3 Refuting the non-true existence of the five sense consciousnesses - 245]........76
L5: [332.222.344.214 Close placement of mindfulness on phenomena - 245]..................................76
L4: [332.222.344.22 Refutation of arguments concerning the two truths - 246]..............................76
L4: [332.222.344.23 Explanation of the logical reasoning that establishes selflessness (functional analysis / causality) – 247 to 265]................................................................................................. 76
L5: [332.222.344.231 Logical reasoning of the vajra thunderbolt – 248 to 260]..................................76
L6: [332.222.344.231.1 Refutation of production from no cause - 249]........................................76
L6: [332.222.344.231.2 Refutation of production from a permanent cause that is other – 250 to 253].................................................................................................................................................. 77
L7: [332.222.344.231.21 Refutation of what is meant by the god Ishvara - 251]...............................77
L7: [332.222.344.231.22 Refutation that Ishvara is the cause of everything for the reason he is permanent - 252]............................................................................................................................................. 77
L7: [332.222.344.231.23 Refutation of permanent atomic particles as the cause of everything - 253]..................................................77
L6: [332.222.344.231.3 Refutation of production from a permanent general principle – 254 to 258].................................................................................................................................................. 77
L7: [332.222.344.231.31 Refuting the assertion that the general principle is the cause of all manifestations - 255]............................................................................................................................................... 77
L7: [332.222.344.231.32 Refuting the assertion that the general principle is permanent - 256]........78
L7: [332.222.344.231.33 Refuting the assertion that an effect can exist at the same time as its cause - 257]............................................................................................................................................... 78
L7: [332.222.344.231.34 Refuting the claim that the Madhyamika school is at fault - 258]............78
L6: [332.222.344.231.4 Summary of the refutation of production from no cause - 259]..................78
L6: [332.222.344.231.5 Refutation of production from both self and other - 260]............................79
L5: [332.222.344.232 Logical reasoning of dependent relationship - 261]........................................79
L5: [332.222.344.233 Logical reasoning that refutes the inherent production of existents and non-existents – 262 to 265] ...............................................................................................................................79
L6: [332.222.344.233.1 Refuting inherently existent production through the establishment of this reasoning - 263] ...............................................................................................................................79
L6: [332.222.344.233.2 Thereby refuting truly existent cessation - 264] ..............................................................................79
L6: [332.222.344.233.3 Thus establishing the equality between cyclic existence and nirvana in terms of lacking true existence - 265] ...............................................................................................................................79

L2: [332.222.345 Encouraging the practitioner to strive for the development of this wisdom (we need both method (compassion) and wisdom (emptiness) together) – 266 to 275] ............79
L3: [332.222.345.1 Showing the meaning of sublime, precious emptiness - 267] ...............................................................79
L3: [332.222.345.2 An explanation that one should strive to realize emptiness - 268] ...............................................................80
L3: [332.222.345.3 The disadvantages of cyclic existence and an explanation of the great compassion – 269 to 274] ...............................................................................................................................80
L4: [332.222.345.31 Reflection of the disadvantages of this life - 270] ..............................................................................80
L4: [332.222.345.32 Reflection of the disadvantages of future lives - 271] ..............................................................................80
L4: [332.222.345.33 Reflection that even born as god or human it is rare to find the time to practice dharma - 272] ...............................................................................................................................80
L4: [332.222.345.34 Reflection on the rarity and great meaning of finding this perfect human rebirth - 273] ...............................................................................................................................80
L4: [332.222.345.35 Thus, oneself and others are afflicted by the sufferings of cyclic existence and it is appropriate to feel sorrow - 274] .................................................................................................81
L3: [332.222.345.4 An explanation of the conceived object of great compassion - 275] ...............................................................81

L1: [CHAPTER X – Dedication] ............................................................................................................................... 82
L2: [332.222.41 Explanation of the brief dedication - 277] ...............................................................................................82
L2: [332.222.42 Explanation of the extensive dedication – 278 to 190] .............................................................................82
L3: [332.222.421 Dedication for the sake of others – 279 to 288] ...........................................................................................82
L4: [332.222.421.1 Dedication to alleviate the sickness of others - 280] .............................................................................82
L4: [332.222.421.2 Dedication to pacify the suffering of the three lower realms - 281] ...............................................................82
L4: [332.222.421.3 Dedication for all gods and humans – 282 to 286] ..............................................................................83
L4: [332.222.421.4 Dedication for all universal beings - 287] ...............................................................................................85
L4: [332.222.421.5 Dedication for all bodhisattvas and other superior beings - 288] ...............................................................85
L3: [332.222.422 Dedication for the sake of oneself - 289] ...............................................................................................85
L3: [332.222.423 Dedication for the flourishing of the buddhadharma, the source of all happiness - 290] ...............................................................86
L2: [332.222.43 Recollecting kindness and prostrating - 291] ...............................................................................................86

******************************************************
******************************************************
******************************************************
L1: [SHORT TABLE OF CONTENTS]

[Preface]
[Introduction]
[CHAPTER I – The Benefit of the Spirit of Awakening]
[CHAPTER II – The Confession of Sin]
[CHAPTER III – Adopting the Spirit of Awakening]
[CHAPTER IV – Attending to the Spirit of Awakening]
[CHAPTER V – Guarding Introspection (moral discipline (2))]
[CHAPTER VI – The Perfection of Patience (3)]
[CHAPTER VII – The Perfection of Zeal (4)]
[CHAPTER VIII – The Perfection of Meditation (5)]
[CHAPTER IX – The Perfection of Wisdom (6)]
[CHAPTER X - Dedication]

*******************************************************

*******************************************************

*******************************************************
Santideva’s classic treatise, the Bodhicaryavatara, translated here as A Guide to the Bodhisattva Way of Life, has been the most widely read, cited, and practiced text in the whole of the Indo-Tibetan Buddhist tradition. Bu ston rin chen grub, a renowned Tibetan scholar of the thirteenth century, wrote in his History of Buddhism in India and Tibet that according to the Buddhist tradition, one hundred commentaries on the Bodhicaryavatara were extant in India, but only eight of them were translated into Tibetan. Moreover, His Holiness the Dalai Lama comments that the Bodhicaryavatara is the primary source of most of the Tibetan Buddhist literature on the cultivation of altruism and the Spirit of Awakening, and his recent comprehensive work entitled The World of Tibetan Buddhism frequently cites this text. The Bodhicaryavatara has also been a widely known and respected text in the Buddhist tradition of Mongolia, and it was the first Buddhist text translated into classical Mongolian from Tibetan by Coiji Odser in 1305.

Although the Bodhicaryavatara has already been translated several times into English, earlier translations have been based exclusively on either Sanskrit versions or Tibetan translations. To the best of our knowledge, no earlier translation into English, including the recent translation by Kate Crosby and Andrew Skilton, has drawn from both the Sanskrit version and its authoritative Sanskrit commentary of Prajnakaramati as well as Tibetan translations and commentaries. Our present translation is based on two Sanskrit editions, namely, Louis de la Vallee Poussin’s edition (1901) of the Bodhicaryavatara and the Panjika commentary of Prajnakaramati, and P. L. Vaidya’s edition (1960) of the Bodhicaryavatara and the Panjika commentary; and it is also based on the Tibetan Derge edition, entitled the Bodhisattva-caryavatara, translated by Sarvajnadeva and dPal brtses. We have also consulted two Tibetan commentaries to this work: sPyod ’jug rnam bshad rgyal sras ’jug ngogs by rGyal tshab dar ma rin chen and Byang chub sems pa’i spyod pa la ’jug pa’i grel bshad rgyal sras rgya mtsho’i yon tan rin po che mi zad jo ba’i bum bzang by Thub bstan chos kyi grags pa. As becomes apparent throughout the text, contrary to popular assumption, the recension incorporated into the Tibetan canon is significantly different from the Sanskrit version edited by Louis de la Vallee Poussin and P. L. Vaidya. This would seem to refute the contention of Crosby and Skilton that the canonical Tibetan translation by Bio Idan shes rab was based on the Sanskrit version available to us today. Moreover, pronouncements concerning which of the extant Sanskrit and Tibetan versions is truer to the original appear to be highly speculative, with very little basis in historical fact. This translation attempts to let these versions speak for themselves—as closely as the English allows—leaving our readers to make their own judgments concerning the degree of antiquity, authenticity, and overall coherence of the Sanskrit and Tibetan renditions of Santideva’s classic treatise.

In terms of our methodology, we have primarily based our translation on the Sanskrit version and its commentary, though we have always consulted the Tibetan translation and its commentaries. Thus, the main text constitutes a translation of both the Sanskrit and Tibetan versions where they do not differ in content. However, in those verses where the Tibetan differs significantly from the Sanskrit, we have included English translations of the Tibetan version in footnotes to the text. Explanatory notes drawn from the Panjika commentary and other sources have also been given in footnotes to the text. Many of the Sanskrit verses of this text are concise and at times cryptic, and they often entail complex syntax. Thus, at times we were forced to take certain freedoms in our translation in order to make the English intelligible.

We hope that this translation will contribute to the greater understanding and appreciation of this classic treatise by Santideva, and that it will inspire others in the further study of this text and other works attributed to this great Indian Buddhist contemplative, scholar, and poet.

Vesna A. Wallace
B. Alan Wallace
Half Moon Bay, California
July 1996

*******************************************************
Santideva, an eighth-century Indian Buddhist monk, is among the most renowned and esteemed figures in the entire history of Mahayana Buddhism. As in the case of many other figures in the history of Indian Buddhism, there is little historical knowledge of the life of Santideva. Two brief accounts of his life are found in Tibetan sources. One early, concise biography was composed by the great Tibetan scholar Bu ston (twelfth-thirteenth century) in his work The History of Buddhism in India and Tibet. A later account was composed by Taranatha (sixteenth-seventeenth century), a prominent Tibetan Buddhist scholar and historian. According to Taranatha, Santideva, like Buddha Sakyamuni, was born into a royal family and was destined for the throne. But on the verge of his coronation, Manjusri, a divine embodiment of wisdom, and Tara, a divine embodiment of compassion, both appeared to him in dreams and counseled him not to ascend to the throne. Thus, he left his father's kingdom, retreated to the wilderness, and devoted himself to meditation. During this time, he achieved advanced states of samadhi and various siddhis, and from that time forward he constantly beheld visions of Manjusri, who guided him as his spiritual mentor.

After this sojourn in the wilderness, he served for awhile as minister to a king, whom he helped to rule in accordance with the principles of Buddhism. But this aroused jealousy on the part of the other ministers, and Santideva withdrew from the service of the king. Making his way to the renowned monastic university of Nalanda, he took monastic ordination and devoted himself to the thorough study of the Buddhist sutras and tantras. It was during this period that he composed two other classic works: the Siksasamuccaya and the Sutrasamsuccaya. But as far as his fellow monks could see, all he did was eat, sleep, and defecate.

Seeking to humiliate him and thus expel him from the monastery, the other scholars compelled him to recite a sutra before the monastic community and the public, a task they thought far exceeded his abilities. After some hesitation, Santideva agreed to the request and asked them, "Shall I recite an existing text or an original composition?" "Recite something new!" they told him, and in response he began chanting the Bodhicaryavatara. During this astonishing recital, when he came to the verse "When neither an entity nor a nonentity remains before the mind...", it is said that he rose up into the sky. Even after his body disappeared from sight, his voice completed the recitation of this text.

Different versions of this work were recorded by his listeners, and they could not come to a consensus as to which was the most accurate. Eventually, the scholars of Nalanda learned that Santideva had come to dwell in the city of Kalihga in Trilihga, and they journeyed there to entreat him to return to the university. Although he declined, he did tell them where to find copies of his other two works, and he told them which of the versions of the Bodhicaryavatara was true to his words.

Thereafter, Santideva retreated to a monastery in a forest filled with wildlife. Some of the other monks noticed that at times animals would enter his cell and not come out, and they accused him of killing them. After he had demonstrated to them that no harm had come to these creatures, he once again departed, despite the pleas of his fellow monks to remain. On this and many other occasions, Santideva is said to have displayed his amazing siddhis. From this point on, he renounced the signs of monkhood and wandered about India, devoting himself to the service of others.
At the outset of this treatise, Santideva denies any originality to his work, and indeed its contents conform closely to the teachings of many of the Mahayana sutras. However, the poignancy and poetic beauty of his work belie his disavowal of any ability in composition. Due to the terse nature of his Sanskrit verses, the aesthetic quality of his treatise has been very difficult to convey in English. Therefore, in our translation, where necessary we have opted for accuracy of content over poetic quality. We hope this does not obscure the fact that the Bodhicaryavatara stands as one of the great literary and religious classics of the entire Buddhist tradition.

The thematic structure of this work is based on the six perfections of generosity, ethical discipline, patience, zeal, meditation, and wisdom, which provide the framework for the Bodhisattva's path to enlightenment. The first three chapters discuss the benefits of bodhicitta, the Spirit of Awakening that motivates the Bodhisattva way of life, and explain the means of cultivating and sustaining this altruistic aspiration. Those topics lay the foundation of the perfection of generosity.

The fourth and fifth chapters discuss the means of implementing the Spirit of Awakening in daily life and thereby address the perfection of ethical discipline. Chapters six, seven, and eight set forth the perfections of patience, zeal, and meditation, respectively. The sixth chapter is widely considered as a classic in its own right, for it presents a broad array of contemplations designed to counteract hatred, which is seen in the Mahayana as the most virulent of all the mental afflictions and the one most antithetical to the Bodhisattva way of life.

The eighth chapter, concerned with the perfection of meditation, has for its main theme the cultivation of altruism and the Spirit of Awakening. In recent years, however, this chapter has raised a certain degree of controversy on the grounds that it is misogynous. To determine whether or not that claim is justified, one must contextualize Santideva's discussion of a particular type of meditation that acts as an antidote to lust. Within the monastic context, the Buddhist teachings as a whole frequently address the impurity of a woman's body as a means of counteracting men's lust for women. Specifically, Santideva was himself a Buddhist monk, and this treatise was initially presented before an audience comprised chiefly of other Buddhist monks, who had taken vows of celibacy. From a Buddhist perspective, lust directed toward another person of either gender is not a sign of respect, regardless of the charming rhetoric that is often inspired by this mental affliction. Rather, attachment for another person actually dehumanizes its object by regarding this individual simply as an object for one's own gratification, rather than as a conscious subject with his or her own needs and desires.

In this eighth chapter, Santideva also discusses the disadvantages of attachment to one's own impure body. In addition, he writes of the problems of attachment to one's friends, possessions, reputation, as well as to women and their bodies. The central point of this entire discussion, as he points out in verse 85 of this chapter, is to become disillusioned with sensual desire. Immediately following this exposition, he addresses the main theme of this chapter, namely the meditative cultivation of altruism and the Spirit of Awakening, which embraces all beings, male and female, with love and compassion. The implication here is that insofar as one is free of self-centered craving for such things as sensual gratification, honor, and wealth, one is primed for the successful cultivation of genuine altruism.

The ninth chapter on the perfection of wisdom is one of the primary expositions in the Indian Buddhist tradition of the Prasangika Madhyamaka view, which accords with the writings of Buddhapalita and Candrakirti. The characteristic theme of this school is that all phenomena are devoid of any intrinsic nature, for they exist purely by the power of conceptual imputation. Thus, the whole of reality is comprised of two truths: conventional truth, which consists solely of dependently related events, and ultimate truth, which is the mere absence of an intrinsic nature of those events. Following a discussion of those two truths, Santideva presents concise Prasangika critiques of specific views of other Buddhist schools, such as the Yogacara and Vaibhasika, and non-Buddhist schools, such as the Samkhya and Nyaya. He also explains the Prasangika interpretation of personal and phenomenal identitylessness and the four applications of mindfulness; and he concludes with a variety of arguments in refutation of true, or intrinsic, existence.

In the tenth, concluding chapter, Santideva offers prayers dedicating the merits of this work for the benefit of all sentient beings. Here he returns to his initial theme of generosity and the Spirit of Awakening, which pervades this entire treatise.
L1: [CHAPTER I – The Benefit of the Spirit of Awakening]

[The Benefit of the Spirit of Awakening -- The benefits of bodhicitta, the two bodhicitta]

/ 0. OM Homage to the Buddha

L2: [331 – The preliminary explanation – 7 to 10]

/ 1. Reverently bowing to the Sugatas, who are endowed with the Dharmakaya, together with their Children and all who are worthy of veneration, I shall concisely present a guide to the discipline of the Children of the Sugatas in accordance with the scriptures.

/ 2. There is nothing here that has not been said before, nor do I have any skill in composition. Thus, I have no concern for the welfare of others, and I have composed this solely to season my own mind.

/ 3. Owing to this, the power of my faith increases to cultivate virtue. Moreover, if someone else with a disposition like my own examines this, it may be meaningful.

L2: [332 – The actual explanation of the stages of the path to enlightenment – 11 to 291]
L3: [332.1 The exhortation to grasp the significance of this precious human existence - 12]

/ 4. This leisure and endowment, which are so difficult to obtain, have been acquired, and they bring about the welfare of the world. If one fails to take this favorable opportunity into consideration, how could this occasion occur again?

L3: [332.2 The method to make this perfect human existence meaningful – 13 to 291]
L4: [332.21 The contemplation of the benefits of bodhicitta – 14 to 21]
L5: [332.211 An explanation of the benefits of bodhicitta - 15]
L6: [a. The conquest of all great evils:]

/ 5. Just as lightning illuminates the darkness of a cloudy night for an instant, in the same way, by the power of the Buddha, occasionally people's minds are momentarily inclined toward merit.

/ 6. Thus, virtue is perpetually ever so feeble, while the power of vice is great and extremely dreadful. If there were no Spirit of Perfect Awakening, what other virtue would overcome it?

L6: [b. The attainment of the most sublime happiness]

/ 7. The Lords of Sages, who have been contemplating for many eons, have seen this alone as a blessing by which joy is easily increased and immeasurable multitudes of beings are rescued.

L6: [c. Wish-fulfillment]

/ 8. Those who long to overcome the abundant miseries of mundane existence, those who wish to dispel the adversities of sentient beings, and those who yearn to experience a myriad of joys should never forsake the Spirit of Awakening.
L6: [d. Bodhicitta carries with it a special name and meaning]

/ 9. When the Spirit of Awakening has arisen, in an instant a wretch who is bound in the prison of the cycle of existence is called a Child of the Sugatas and becomes worthy of reverence in the worlds of gods and humans.

L6: [e. Transformation of the interior into the supreme]

/ 10. Upon taking this impure form, it transmutes it into the priceless image of the gem of the Jina. So, firmly hold to the quicksilver elixir, called the Spirit of Awakening, which must be utterly transmuted.

L6: [f. The value of the precious bodhicitta, so difficult to find]

/ 11. The world’s sole leaders, whose minds are fathomless, have well examined its great value. You who are inclined to escape from the states of mundane existence, hold fast to the jewel of the Spirit of Awakening.

L6: [g. The inexhaustible and increasing fruits of bodhicitta]

/ 12. Just as a plantain tree decays upon losing its fruit, so does every other virtue wane. But the tree of the Spirit of Awakening perpetually bears fruit, does not decay, and only flourishes.

L6: [h. The power of protection from great fear]

/ 13. Owing to its protection, as due to the protection of a powerful man, even after committing horrendous vices, one immediately overcomes great fears. Why do ignorant beings not seek refuge in it?

L6: [i. The swift and easy destruction of great evil]

/ 14. Like the conflagration at the time of the destruction of the universe, it consumes great vices in an instant. The wise Lord Maitreya taught its incalculable benefits to Sudhana.

L5: [332.212 Recognition of Bodhicitta – 16 to 19]

L6: [332.212.1 Divisions of Bodhicitta - 17]

/ 15. In brief, this Spirit of Awakening is known to be of two kinds: the spirit of aspiring for Awakening, and the spirit of venturing toward Awakening.

/ 16. Just as one perceives the difference between a person who yearns to travel and a traveler, so do the learned recognize the corresponding difference between those two.

L6: [332.212.2 Benefits of the aspiring mind of bodhicitta - 18]

/ 17. Although the result of the spirit of aspiring for Awakening is great within the cycle of existence, it is still not like the continual state of merit of the spirit of venturing.
L6: [332.212.3 Benefits of the engaging mind of bodhicitta - 19]

18. From the time that one adopts that Spirit with an irreversible attitude for the sake of liberating limitless sentient beings,
19. From that moment on, an uninterrupted stream of merit, equal to the sky, constantly arises even when one is asleep or distracted.

L5: [332.213 The reasons for the benefits of bodhicitta - 20]

20. The Tathagata himself cogently asserted this in the Subahuprccha for the sake of beings who are inclined toward the Lesser Vehicle.
21. A well-intentioned person who thinks, "I shall eliminate the headaches of sentient beings," bears immeasurable merit.
22. What then of a person who desires to remove the incomparable pain of every single being and endow them with immeasurable good qualities?
23. Who has even a mother or father with such altruism? Would the gods, sages, or Brahmas have it?
24. If those beings have never before had that wish for their own sake even in their dreams, how could they possibly have it for the sake of others?
25. How does this unprecedented and distinguished jewel, whose desire for the benefit of others does not arise in others even for their own self-interest, come into existence?
26. How can one measure the merit of the jewel of the mind, which is the seed of the world's joy and is the remedy for the world's suffering?
27. If reverence for the Buddhas is exceeded merely by an altruistic intention, how much more so by striving for the complete happiness of all sentient beings?
28. Those desiring to escape from suffering hasten right toward suffering. With the very desire for happiness, out of delusion they destroy their own happiness as if it were an enemy.
29. He satisfies with all joys those who are starving for happiness and eliminates all the sorrows of those who are afflicted in many ways.
30. He dispels delusion. Where else is there such a saint? Where else is there such a friend? Where else is there such merit?

L5: [332.214 Praise to the one who gives birth to the bodhicitta - 21]

31. Even one who repays a kind deed is praised somewhat, so what should be said of a Bodhisattva whose good deed is unsolicited?
32. The world honors as virtuous one who makes a gift to a few people, even if it is merely a momentary and contemptuous donation of plain food and support for half a day.
33. What then of one who forever bestows to countless sentient beings the fulfillment of all yearnings, which is inexhaustible until the end of beings as limitless as space?

34. The Lord declared, "One who brings forth an impure thought in his heart against a benefactor, a Child of the Jina, will dwell in hells for as many eons as there were impure thoughts."

35. But if one's mind is kindly inclined, one will bring forth an even greater fruit. Even when a greatly violent crime is committed against the Children of the Jinas, their virtue spontaneously arises.

36. I pay homage to the bodies of those in whom this precious jewel of the mind has arisen. I go for refuge to those who are mines of joy, toward whom even an offence results in happiness.

--------------
36 verses

**************************************************************************
**************************************************************************
**************************************************************************

--------------
L1: [CHAPTER II – The Confession of Sin]

[The Confession of Sin -- Disclosure of evil / purification]

[The first 3 of 7 limbs: offering, prostration, refuge, confession and the four opponent powers: regret, reliance, opponent force, promise]

[332.22 How to practice the six perfections once bodhicitta has been developed – 22 to 291]
[332.221 Maintaining the bodhicitta – 23 to 64]
[332.221 How to destroy obstacles and purify evil – 24 to 45]

L2: [332.221.11 The preliminary limbs of practice – 25 to 40]

L3: [332.221.111 Offering – 26 to 33]

/    1. In order to adopt that jewel of the mind, I make offerings to the Tathagatas, to the stainless jewel of the sublime Dharma, and to the Children of the Buddhas, who are oceans of excellent qualities.

/    2. As many flowers, fruits, and medicinal herbs as there are, and as many jewels as there are in the world, and clear and pleasant waters,

/    3. Jeweled mountains, forested regions, and other delightful and solitary places, vines shining with the ornaments of lovely flowers, and trees with branches bowed with delicious fruit,

/    4. Fragrances and incenses, wish-fulfilling trees, jeweled trees, lakes adorned with lotuses, enchanting calls of wild geese in the worlds of gods and other celestials,

/    5. Uncultivated crops, planted crops, and other things that ornament the venerable ones, all these that are unowned and that extend throughout space,

/    6. I bring to mind and offer to the Foremost of Sages together with their Children. May those worthy of precious gifts, the greatly merciful ones, compassionate toward me, accept these from me.

/    7. Devoid of merit and destitute, I have nothing else to offer. Therefore, may the Protectors, whose concerns are for the welfare of others, accept this by their own power for my sake.

/    8. I completely offer my entire self to the Jinas and their Children. O Supreme Beings, accept me! I reverently devote myself to your service.

/    9. Being free from fear of mundane existence due to your protection, I shall serve sentient beings; I shall completely transcend my earlier vices, and henceforth I shall sin no more.

/    10. In sweetly fragrant bathing chambers whose beautiful pillars are radiant with jewels, glowing canopies made of pearls, and crystal floors transparent and sparkling,

/    11. I bathe the Tathagatas and their Children with many vases studded with superb jewels and filled with pleasing, fragrant flowers and water, to the accompaniment of songs and instrumental music.

/    12. I dry their bodies with scented, immaculate, exquisite cloths; then I offer them beautifully colored and sweetly fragrant garments.
13. I adorn Samantabhadra, Ajita, Manjughosa, Lokesvara, and others with those divine, soft, delicate, and colorful raiments and with the most precious of jewels.

14. With perfumes permeating a thousand million worlds, I anoint the bodies of the Lords of Sages that are blazing with the luster of well-refined, rubbed, and polished gold.

15. I worship the most glorious Lords of Sages with all wonderfully fragrant and pleasing blossoms—mandarava flowers, blue lotuses, and others—and with splendidly arranged garlands.

16. I perfume them with enchanting clouds of incenses having a pungent and pervasive aroma. I offer them feasts consisting of various foods and drinks.

17. I offer them jeweled lamps, mounted in rows on golden lotuses; and I scatter lovely drifts of blossoms on the floor anointed with perfume.

18. To those filled with love I also offer brilliant multitudes of palaces, delightful with songs of praise, radiant with garlands of pearls and jewels, and ornamented at the entrances in four directions.

19. I bring to mind the great sages' exquisitely beautiful, jeweled parasols perfectly raised with golden handles, lovely shapes, and inlaid pearls.

20. Thereafter, may delightful clouds of offerings rise high, and clouds of instrumental music that enrapture all sentient beings.

21. May showers of flowers, jewels, and the like continually fall on the images, reliquaries, and all the jewels of the sublime Dharma.

22. Just as Manjughosa and others worship the Jinas, so do I worship the Tathagatas, the Protectors, together with their Children.

23. With hymns that are seas of melodies, I praise the Oceans of Virtues. May the clouds of harmonies of praise ascend to them in the same way.

24. With prostrations as numerous as the atoms within all the Buddha-fields, I bow to the Buddhas present in all the three times, to the Dharma, and to the Sublime Assembly.

25. Likewise, I pay homage to all the shrines and to the resting-places of the Bodhisattva. I prostrate to the preceptors and to the praiseworthy adepts as well.

26. I go for refuge to the Buddha as far as the quintessence of enlightenment; I go for refuge to the Dharma and the community of Bodhisattvas.
27. With folded hands I beseech the Fully Awakened Ones present in all directions and the greatly compassionate Bodhisattvas.

28. Whatever sin I, a brute, have committed or caused others to commit in this life and others throughout the beginningless cycle of existence,

29. And anything in which I have deludedly rejoiced, thereby harming myself—that transgression I confess, overcome by remorse.

30. Whatever offence I have committed, out of disrespect, with my body, speech, and mind against the Three Jewels, against mothers and fathers, and against spiritual mentors and others,

31. And whatever terrible vices I, a sinner, defiled with many faults, have done, O Guides, I confess them all.

32. How shall I escape it? Rescue me quickly! May death not soon creep up on me before my vices have vanished.

33. Death does not differentiate between tasks done and undone. This traitor is not to be trusted by the healthy or the ill, for it is like an unexpected, great thunderbolt.

34. I have committed various vices for the sake of friends and enemies. This I have not recognized: "Leaving everyone behind, I must pass away."

35. My enemies will not remain, nor will my friends remain. I shall not remain. Nothing will remain.

36. Whatever is experienced will fade to a memory. Like an experience in a dream, everything that has passed will not be seen again.

37. Even in this life, as I have stood by, many friends and enemies have passed away, but terrible sin induced by them remains ahead of me.

38. Thus, I have not considered that I am ephemeral. Due to delusion, attachment, and hatred, I have sinned in many ways.

39. Day and night, a life span unceasingly diminishes, and there is no adding onto it. Shall I not die then?

40. Although lying here on a bed and relying on relatives, I alone have to bear the feeling of being cut off from my vitality.

41. For a person seized by the messengers of Death, what good is a relative and what good is a friend? At that time, merit alone is a protection, and I have not applied myself to it.

42. O Protectors, I, negligent and unaware of this danger, have acquired many vices out of attachment to this transient life.

43. One completely languishes while being led today to have the limbs of one's body amputated. Parched with thirst, and with pitiable eyes, one sees the world differently.

44. How much more is one overpowered by the horrifying appearances of the messengers of Death as one is consumed by the fever of terror and smeared with a mass of excrement?
45. With distressed glances I seek protection in the four directions. Which good person will be my protection from this great fear?

46. Seeing the four directions devoid of protection, I return to confusion. What shall I do in that state of great fear?

47. Right now I go for refuge to the Protectors of the World whose power is great, to the Jinas, who strive to protect the world and who eliminate every fear.

48. Likewise, I earnestly go for refuge to the Dharma that is mastered by them and that annihilates the fear of the cycle of existence, and to the assembly of Bodhisattvas as well.

49. Trembling with fear, I offer myself to Samantabhadra, and of my own will I offer myself to Manjughosa.

50. Terrified, I utter a mournful cry to the Protector Avalokita, whose conduct overflows with compassion, that he may protect me, a sinner.

51. Seeking protection, I earnestly invoke noble Akasagarbha, Ksitigarbha, and all the Compassionate Ones.

52. I bow to Vajri, upon the sight of whom the messengers of Death and other malevolent beings flee in terror to the four directions.

53. After neglecting your counsel, in terror I go to you for refuge now as I face this fear. Swiftly remove my fear!

54. Even one frightened by a fleeting illness would not disregard the physician’s advice; how much more so one afflicted by the four hundred and four diseases,

55. Of which just one can annihilate all people living in Jambudvipa, and for which a medicine is not found in any region.

56. If I disregard the counsel of the Omniscient Physician who removes every pain, shame on me, extremely deluded one that I am!

57. If I stand very attentive even on a smaller cliff, then how much more so on an enduring chasm of a thousand leagues?

58. It is inappropriate for me to be at ease, thinking, "Just today death will not arrive." The time when I will not exist is inevitable.

59. Who can give me fearlessness? How shall I escape? I shall certainly not exist. Why is my mind at ease?
L3: [332.221.124 The power of the promise - 45]

/ 60. What of value has remained with me from earlier experiences, which have disappeared, and engrossed in which I neglected the counsel of spiritual mentors?

/ 61. Upon forsaking my relatives and friends and this world of the living, alone I shall go elsewhere. What is the use of all my friends and enemies?

[Conclusions]

/ 62. In that case, only this concern is appropriate for me day and night: How shall I surely escape suffering on account of that nonvirtue?

/ 63. Whatever vice, whatever natural misdeed, and whatever misdeed by prohibition, an ignorant fool, have accumulated,

/ 64. Terrified of suffering, all this I confess, standing with folded hands in the presence of the Protectors and bowing repeatedly.

/ 65. May the Guides be aware of my transgressions together with my iniquity. O Protectors, may I not commit this evil again!

-----------

65 verses

******************************************************
******************************************************
******************************************************

L1: [CHAPTER III – Adopting the Spirit of Awakening]

[Adopting the Spirit of Awakening -- Full acceptance of Bodhicitta / accumulating merit as a prerequisite]

[The four last of 7 limbs: rejoicing in virtue, requesting the Buddhas to turn the wheel of dharma, beseeching the Buddhas not to pass away, dedicating merit. Training the mind in giving (generosity), taking the vows (moral discipline), fulfilling the two wishes of self and others]

[332.221.2 How to accept and hold onto the actual bodhicitta – 46 to 64]

L2: [332.221.21 The preparatory practice for accumulating merit – 47 to 56]

L3: [332.221.211 Rejoicing in virtue - 48]

/ 1. I happily rejoice in the virtue of all sentient beings, which relieves the suffering of the miserable states of existence. May those who suffer dwell in happiness.

/ 2. I rejoice in sentient beings' liberation from the suffering of the cycle of existence, and I rejoice in the Protectors' Bodhisattva-hood and Buddhahood.
3. I rejoice in the teachers' oceanic expressions of the Spirit of Awakening, which delight and benefit all sentient beings.

L3: [332.221.212 Requesting the Buddhas to turn the wheel of dharma - 49]

4. With folded hands I beseech the Fully Awakened Ones in all directions that they may kindle the light of Dharma for those who fall into suffering owing to confusion.

L3: [332.221.213 Beseeching the Buddhas not to pass away - 50]

5. With folded hands I supplicate the Jinas who wish to leave for nirvana that they may stay for countless eons, and that this world may not remain in darkness.

L3: [332.221.214 Dedicating – 51 to 55]

6. May the virtue that I have acquired by doing all this relieve every suffering of sentient beings.

7. May I be the medicine and the physician for the sick. May I be their nurse until their illness never recurs.

8. With showers of food and drink may I overcome the afflictions of hunger and thirst. May I become food and drink during times of famine.

9. May I be an inexhaustible treasury for the destitute. With various forms of assistance may I remain in their presence.

10. For the sake of accomplishing the welfare of all sentient beings, I freely give up my body, enjoyments, and all my virtues of the three times.

L3: [332.221.215 Training the mind in Giving (1) - 56]

11. Surrendering everything is nirvana, and my mind seeks nirvana. If I must surrender everything, it is better that I give it to sentient beings.

12. For the sake of all beings I have made this body pleasureless. Let them continually beat it, revile it, and cover it with filth.

13. Let them play with my body. Let them laugh at it and ridicule it. What does it matter to me? I have given my body to them.

14. Let them have me perform deeds that are conducive to their happiness. Whoever resorts to me, may it never be in vain.

15. For those who have resorted to me and have an angry or unkind thought, may even that always be the cause for their accomplishing every goal.

16. May those who falsely accuse me, who harm me, and who ridicule me all partake of Awakening.
17. May I be a protector for those who are without protectors, a guide for travelers, and a boat, a bridge, and a ship for those who wish to cross over.

18. May I be a lamp for those who seek light, a bed for those who seek rest, and may I be a servant for all beings who desire a servant.

19. To all sentient beings may I be a wish-fulfilling gem, a vase of good fortune, an efficacious mantra, a great medication, a wish-fulfilling tree, and a wish-granting cow.

20. Just as earth and other elements are useful in various ways to innumerable sentient beings dwelling throughout infinite space,

21. So may I be in various ways a source of life for the sentient beings present throughout space until they are all liberated.

22. Just as the Sugatas of old adopted the Spirit of Awakening, and just as they properly conformed to the practice of the Bodhisattvas,

23. So I myself shall generate the Spirit of Awakening for the sake of the world; and so I myself shall properly engage in those practices.

24. Upon gladly adopting the Spirit of Awakening in this way, an intelligent person should thus nurture the Spirit in order to fulfill his wish:

25. Now my life is fruitful. Human existence is well obtained. Today I have been born into the family of the Buddhas. Now I am a Child of the Buddha.

26. Thus, whatever I do now should accord with [the Bodhisattvas'] family, and it should not be like a stain on this pure family.

27. Just as a blind man might find a jewel amongst heaps of rubbish, so this Spirit of Awakening has somehow arisen in me.

28. It is the elixir of life produced to vanquish death in the world. It is an inexhaustible treasure eliminating the poverty of the world.

29. It is the supreme medicine that alleviates the illness of the world. It is the tree of rest for beings exhausted from wandering on the pathways of mundane existence.

30. It is the universal bridge for all travelers on their crossing over miserable states of existence. It is the rising moon of the mind that soothes the mental afflictions of the world.
31. It is the great sun dispelling the darkness of the world’s ignorance. It is the fresh butter formed from churning the milk of Dharma.

32. For the caravan of beings traveling on the path of mundane existence and starving for the meal of happiness, it is the feast of happiness that satisfies all sentient beings who have come as guests.

33. Today I invite the world to Sugatahood and (meanwhile to) temporal happiness. May the gods, asuras, and others rejoice in the presence of all the Protectors!
L1: [CHAPTER IV – Attending to the Spirit of Awakening]

[Attending to the Spirit of Awakening -- Conscientiousness / awareness]

[Preventing the Bodhicitta from decreasing by conscientiously attending to the wholesome actions of our body, speech and mind. – Importance to be alert all the time.]

[332.222 How to practice the six perfections – 65 to 291]
[332.222.1 Meditating on the method of conscientiousness so that the bodhicitta practice and the precepts do not degenerate – 66 to 97]

L2: [332.222.11 A brief description of conscientiousness - 67]

/ 1. Thus, upon firmly adopting the Spirit of Awakening, a Child of the Jinas should always vigilantly strive not to neglect his training.

L2: [332.222.12 Extensive explanation of conscientiousness – 68 to 96]
L3: [332.222.121 Meditating on conscientiousness with respect to bodhicitta – 69 to 74]

/ 2. Although one has made a commitment, it is appropriate [to reconsider] whether or not to do that which has been rashly undertaken and which has not been well considered.

/ 3. But shall I discard that which has been examined by the sagacious Buddhas and their Children, as well as by myself according to the best of my abilities?

/ 4. If, upon making such a promise, I do not put it into action, then having deceived those sentient beings, what destiny shall I have?

/ 5. It has been said that a person who intended to give away even a tiny thing but does not do so becomes a preta.

/ 6. Then all the more so, having deceived the entire world after loudly and sincerely inviting it to unsurpassable happiness, what state of existence shall I have?

/ 7. Only the Omniscient One knows the inconceivable course of action of those people whom he liberates even when they forsake the Spirit of Awakening.

/ 8. Therefore, for a Bodhisattva it is the heaviest downfall of all; for if he commits such a downfall, he impairs the welfare of all sentient beings.

/ 9. If someone else hinders his virtue, even for a moment, there will be no end to his miserable states of existence, because he diminishes the welfare of sentient beings.

/ 10. One would be destroyed, obliterating the well-being of even one sentient being; how much more so of beings dwelling throughout all of space?

/ 11. Thus, due to the power of downfalls and due to the power of the Spirit of Awakening, one revolving in the cycle of existence is slow in attaining the Bodhisattva Grounds.
12. Therefore, I should respectfully act in accordance with my commitment. If I do not make an effort now, I shall go from lower to lower states.

13. Innumerable Buddhas have gone by, seeking out every sentient being; but through my own fault, I have not come into the domain of their cure.

14. If I remain like this, as I am now, I will repeatedly come to the miserable states of existence, illness, death, amputation, destruction, and the like.

15. When shall I encounter the extremely rare appearance of the Tathagata, faith, human existence, and the ability to practice virtue?

16. Health, daily sustenance, and lack of adversity? Life is momentary and deceptive; and the body is as if on loan.

17. With such behavior on my part, a human state is certainly not obtained again. When a human state is not achieved, there is only vice; and how could there be blessing?

18. If I do not perform virtue even when I am capable of it, what then shall I do when fully dazed by the sufferings of miserable states of existence?

19. For one who does not perform virtue but accumulates sin, even the expression "favorable state of existence" will be lost for a thousand million eons.

20. Therefore, the Blessed One stated that human existence is extremely difficult to obtain, like a turtle’s head emerging into the ring of a yoke on a vast ocean.

21. One dwells in the Avici hell for an eon as a consequence of a vice committed in a single moment. What then can be said of a favorable state of existence, since sin has been accumulated since beginningless time?

22. Having experienced that alone, one is still not liberated. Therefore, while experiencing it, one begets more vices.

23. Upon obtaining such leisure, if I do not practice virtue, then there is no duplicity greater than this, and there is no delusion greater than this.

24. If I recognize this and still deludedly fall into sloth, then when I am commanded by the messengers of Yama, I shall long remain in great anguish.

25. The unendurable fire of hell will scorch my body for ages, and afterward the fire of remorse will torment my undisciplined mind for a long time.

26. I have somehow obtained the advantageous state that is very difficult to achieve, and though aware of that, I am led back to those same hells.
27. I have no will in this matter, as if bewitched by spells. I do not know by whom I am bewitched or who dwells inside me.

28. Enemies such as craving and hatred are without arms, legs, and so on. They are neither courageous nor wise. How is it that they have enslaved me?

29. Stationed in my mind, they ruin me, while remaining well-established themselves; and yet I do not get angry at my forbearance with this shameful and improper situation.

30. If all gods and humans were my enemies, even they would be unable to bring me to the fire of the Avici hell.

31. When encountered, it consumes even the ashes of Mount Meru. Mental afflictions, the mighty enemies, instantly throw me there.

32. For the longevity of all other enemies is not so enduring, beginningless, and endless as that of my enemies, the mental afflictions.

33. Everyone becomes favorably disposed when tended with kindness, but when these mental afflictions are honored, they bring about suffering all the more.

34. How can I take delight in the cycle of existence when constant, long-lasting enemies, who are the sole cause of the currents and floods of adversities, fearlessly dwell in my heart?

35. How can I be happy if the guardians of the prison of the cycle of existence, these murderers and slaughterers in hells and the like, remain in the cage of greed within the dwelling of my heart?

36. Therefore, as long as these enemies are not destroyed before my eyes, I shall not forsake my task. Those lofty with pride, who are enraged at someone who gives them even a minor insult, will not sleep until they kill him.

37. At the height of a battle, ready to slaughter those who are in darkness and who are naturally subject to suffering through death, those afflicted with injuries from countless spears and arrows do not turn back without accomplishing their goal.

38. What then when I am eager to destroy my natural enemies, which are the perpetual cause of all miseries? Today, even if I am [beset] with a hundred adversities, why am I weary and despondent?

39. If they wear scars from their enemies for no reason as if they were ornaments, then why do sufferings trouble me when I am set to accomplish a great goal?

40. If fishermen, outcasts, farmers, and others, whose minds are fixed merely on their own livelihoods, withstand the adversities of cold and heat, then why do I not endure for the sake of the well-being of the world?

41. While I have promised to liberate beings throughout space in the ten directions from their mental afflictions, I have not liberated even myself from mental afflictions.

42. Without knowing my own limitations, I spoke at that time as if I were a bit insane. Therefore, I shall never turn back from vanquishing mental afflictions.
/ 43. I shall be tenacious in this matter; and fixed on revenge, I shall wage war, except against those mental afflictions that are related to the elimination of mental afflictions.

/ 44. Let my entrails ooze out and my head fall off, but by no means shall I bow down to my enemies, the mental afflictions.

/ 45. Even if exiled, an enemy may acquire a residence and followers in another country whence he returns with his full strength. But there is no such course for the enemy, the mental afflictions.

/ 46. Once the affliction that dwells in my mind has been expelled, where would it go, and where would it rest and attempt to destroy me? Feeble in spirit, I am lacking in perseverance. Mental afflictions are frail and conquerable with the eye of wisdom.

/ 47. Mental afflictions do not exist in sense objects, nor in the sense faculties, nor in the space between, nor anywhere else. Then where do they exist and agitate the whole world? This is an illusion only. Liberate your fearing heart and cultivate perseverance for the sake of wisdom. Why would you torture yourself in hells for no reason?

/ 48. After pondering in this way, I shall make an effort to apply the teachings as they have been explained. How can someone who could be cured by medicine be restored to health if he strays from the physician's advice?
[Guarding the practice by guarding the mind with mindfulness and alertness. Everything comes from the mind. No absolute laws to follow; the importance is to always be sure to have good intention before acting: in order to purify the mind, for the benefits of others directly or indirectly (bodhicitta).]

[332.222.2 Practicing mindfulness and alertness as the observation of pure moral discipline – 98 to 117]

1. Those who wish to protect their practice should zealously guard the mind. The practice cannot be protected without guarding the unsteady mind.

2. Untamed, mad elephants do not inflict as much harm in this world as does the unleashed elephant of the mind in the Avici hell and the like.

3. But if the elephant of the mind is completely restrained by the rope of mindfulness, then all perils vanish and complete well-being is obtained.

4. Tigers, lions, elephants, bears, snakes, all enemies, all guardians of hells, dakinis and demons become controlled by controlling the mind alone.

5. By subduing the mind alone, they all become subdued.

6. For the Propounder of the Truth said that all fears and immeasurable sufferings arise from the mind only.

7. Who diligently constructed the weapons in hell? Who devised the floor of heated iron? And from where have those women come?

8. The Sage declared that all of that has arisen from the evil mind, so there is nothing else in the three worlds more formidable than the mind.

9. If the perfection of generosity makes the world free of poverty, how is it possible that the Protectors of the past acquired it, when the world is still impoverished today?

10. The perfection of generosity is interpreted simply as a state of mind due to the intention of giving away everything, together with the fruits of that, to all people.

11. Where can fish and the like be taken where I could not kill them? When the mind of renunciation is obtained, that is considered the perfection of ethical discipline.

12. How many malicious people, as [unending] as space, can I kill? When the mind-state of anger is slain, then all enemies are slain.

13. Where would there be leather enough to cover the entire world? The earth is covered over merely with the leather of my sandals.
14. Likewise, I am unable to restrain external phenomena, but I shall restrain my own mind. What need is there to restrain anything else?

15. Even when accompanied by body and speech, feeble mental activity does not have results such as Brahmahood and alike, which the mind alone has when it is clear.

16. The Omniscient One stated that all recitations and austerities, even though performed for a long time, are actually useless if the mind is on something else or is dull.

17. Those who have not cultivated the mind, which is the mystery and the very essence of Dharma, uselessly wander in space in order to eliminate suffering and find happiness.

18. Therefore, I should well control and well guard my mind. Once I have forsaken the vow of guarding the mind, of what use are many vows to me?

19. Just as those standing in the midst of boisterous people carefully guard their wounds, so those standing in the midst of evil people should always guard the wounds of their minds.

20. Fearing slight pain from a wound, I guard it with great care. Why don't I, fearing the crushing of the mountains of the Samghata hell, guard the wound of my mind?

21. Living with this attitude even among evil people and among maidens, with steadfast effort, a persevering sage will not be defeated.

22. Let my possessions freely vanish; let my honor, my body, livelihood, and everything else pass away. But may my virtuous mind never be lost.

L2: [332.222.22 The method of guarding the mind is to practice mindfulness and alertness – 100 to 106]

23. I appeal to those desiring to guard their minds: always diligently guard your mindfulness and introspection.

24. Just as a person smitten by disease is unfit for any work, so the mind lacking those two is not fit for any work.

25. What has been heard, pondered, and cultivated, like water in a cracked jar, does not remain in the memory of the mind that lacks introspection.

26. Even many learned people who have faith and extraordinary perseverance become defiled by vices on account of the fault of lacking introspection.

27. Even upon accumulating virtues, those who have been robbed by the thief of non-introspection, who comes after the loss of mindfulness, enter miserable states of existence.

28. This band of thieves, the mental afflictions, looks for an entrance. Upon finding an entrance, it plunders and destroys life in fortunate realms of existence.

29. Therefore, mindfulness should never be displaced from the gate of the mind. If it is gone, it should be reinstated while recalling the anguish of hell.
30. Mindfulness easily arises for those of good fortune because of their association with a spiritual mentor, and for those who are reverent on account of the instruction of a preceptor and because of their fear.

31. The Buddhas and Bodhisattvas have unobstructed vision in all directions. Everything is in their presence; and I stand in front of them.

32. Meditating thus, one should remain filled with a sense of propriety, respect, and fear; and one should repeatedly think of the Buddhas in this way.

33. When mindfulness stands guard at the gate of the mind, introspection arrives, and once it has come, it does not depart again.

34. First, I should always establish this mind in such a manner, and I should always remain still as if without sense faculties, like a piece of wood.

35. One should never cast one's gaze around without purpose. One should always direct one's gaze downward as if in meditation.

36. However, one should occasionally look around in order to relax the gaze; and if one notices a mere reflection of someone, one should look up to greet him.

37. In order to detect danger on the road and so forth, one should look to the four directions for a moment. Pausing, one should look in the distance, looking behind only after turning around.

38. Upon looking forward or behind, one should go ahead or turn back. Likewise, in all situations one should proceed after realizing what needs to be done.

39. Thinking, "The body should remain like this," and resorting to action again, one should periodically look afresh to see how the body is positioned.

40. In this way the mad elephant of the mind should be watched diligently so that it is not loosed while tied to the great pillar of the thought of Dharma.

41. One should examine the mind in this way—where is mine engaged?—so that it does not even for a moment leave the pole of concentration.

42. If one is unable to do so in the case of danger or a festive occasion, then one should be at ease. It is said that at the time of giving, ethical discipline may be held in abeyance.

43. Uponrecognizing what needs to be undertaken, with a mind focused on that, one should attend to nothing else until one accomplishes it.

44. For in this way everything is well done. Otherwise neither will occur, and the mental affliction of non-introspection will increase as well.

45. One should eliminate yearning that arises for various idle conversations, which often take place, and for all kinds of entertainment.
46. If useless crushing of the earth, ripping of grass, or drawing in the dirt takes place, then fearfully recalling the teaching of the Tathagata, one should instantly stop it.

47. When one intends to move or when one intends to speak, one should first examine one's own mind and then act appropriately with composure.

48. When one sees one's own mind to be attached or repulsed, then one should neither act nor speak, but remain still like a piece of wood.

49. When my mind is haughty, sarcastic, full of conceit and arrogance, ridiculing, evasive, and deceitful,

50. When it is inclined to boast, or when it is contemptuous of others, abusive, and irritable, then I should remain still like a piece of wood.

51. When my mind seeks material gain, honor, and fame, or when it seeks attendants and service, then I will remain still like a piece of wood.

52. When my mind is averse to the interests of others and seeks my own self-interest, or when it wishes to speak out of a desire for an audience, then I will remain still like a piece of wood.

53. When it is impatient, indolent, timid, impudent, garrulous, or biased in my own favor, then I will remain still like a piece of wood.

54. Perceiving in this way that the mind is afflicted or engaged in fruitless activities, the hero should always firmly control it by means of an antidote to that.

55. Resolute, confident, steadfast, respectful and courteous, modest, meek, calm, devoted to pleasing others,

56. Undistressed by the mutually incompatible desires of foolish people, endowed with compassion, knowing that they are like this as a consequence of the arising of their mental afflictions,

57. Always resorting to irreproachable things for the sake of myself and others, I will maintain my mind free of pride, like an apparition.

58. Remembering over and over again that after a long time the best of moments of leisure has been obtained, I will keep this mind unshakable, like Sumeru.

59. One does not object when the body is being dragged here and there by vultures coveting its flesh. Then why do so now?

60. Mind, why do you protect this body, appropriating it as your own? If it is really separate from you, what good is it to you?

61. O fool, if you do not consider as your own a pure wooden statue, why are you guarding this foul machine composed of impurities?

62. First, with your own intellect, peel off this sheath of skin, and with the knife of wisdom loosen the flesh from the skeleton.
63. Breaking the bones, look inside at the marrow and examine for yourself, "Where is the essence here?"

64. If searching carefully in this way, you do not see an essence here, then say why you are still protecting the body today.

65. If you would not eat it, as impure as it is, and if you would not drink the blood nor suck out the entrails, then what will you do with the body?

66. However, it is proper to guard it for the sake of feeding the vultures and jackals. This wretched body of humans is an instrument for action.

67. Even though you protect it so, merciless death will snatch the body away and give it to the vultures. What will you do then?

68. You do not give clothing and such to a servant if you think he will not stay. The body will eat and pass away. Then why do you waste yourself?

69. Therefore, mind, upon giving the body its wages, now serve your own needs, because not everything earned by a laborer should be given to him.

70. Consider the body as a ship because it is the basis of coming and going. Set the body in motion at your will in order to accomplish the welfare of sentient beings.

71. One who has become self-controlled in that way should always have a smiling face. One should give up frowning and grimacing, be the first to greet, and be a friend to the world.

72. One should not inconsiderately and noisily throw around chairs and the like. One should not pound on the door, and one should always delight in silence.

73. The crane, the cat, or the thief, moving silently and covertly, achieves its desired goal. A sage should always move in such a way.

74. One must respectfully accept the advice of those skilled in directing others and providing unsolicited aid. One should always be the pupil of everyone.

75. One should express one’s appreciation for all good words. Having seen someone engaging in virtue, one should cheer him on with praises.

76. One should speak of others’ good qualities in their absence and relate them again with satisfaction; and when one’s own virtue is discussed, one should consider it as appreciation for good qualities.

77. All endeavors are for the sake of satisfaction, which is difficult to obtain even by means of wealth. So I will enjoy the pleasure of satisfaction in good qualities diligently accomplished by others.

78. There will be no loss for me in this life, and there will be great happiness in the hereafter. But due to animosities, there is the suffering of aversion and great misery in the hereafter.

79. In a soft and gentle voice one should speak sincere, coherent words that have clear meaning and are agreeable, pleasant to the ear, and rooted in compassion.
80. One should always look straight at sentient beings as if drinking them in with the eyes, thinking, "Relying on them alone, I shall attain Buddhahood."

81. Great blessing arises from continuous yearning for the fields of virtues and kindness, and from an antidote with regard to those who are suffering.

82. Skillful and vigorous, one should always do the work oneself. With respect to all works, one should not leave the opportunity to someone else.

83. The perfections of generosity and so forth are progressively more and more lofty. One should not forsake a better one for the sake of a lesser, unless it is in accordance with the bridge of the Bodhisattva way of life. (Tibetan: "...Do not forsake the greater for the sake of the lesser, and most importantly, consider the welfare of others. ")

84. Realizing this, one should always strive for the benefit of others. Even that which is prohibited has been permitted for the compassionate one who foresees benefit.

85. Sharing with those who have fallen into miserable states of existence, with those who have no protector, and with mendicants, one should eat moderately small portions. Except for the three robes, one should give away everything.

86. For the sake of an insignificant benefit, one should not harm the body that practices the sublime Dharma, for only in this way can one quickly fulfill the hopes of sentient beings.

87. Therefore, when the thought of compassion is impure, one should not sacrifice one's life, but it should be sacrificed when one's thought is unbiased. Thus, life must not be wasted.

88. One should not teach the profound and vast Dharma to the disrespectful, to a healthy person wearing a headdress, to a person with an umbrella, a stick, or a weapon, to one whose head is veiled,

89. To those who are inadequate, nor to women in the absence of a man. One should pay equal respect to inferior and superior Dharmas.

90. One should not expose a vessel of the vast Dharma to an inferior Dharma. Putting aside the Bodhisattva way of life, one should not seduce them with sutras and mantras.

91. Flagrantly discarding a tooth-stick or spitting is undesirable, and urinating and so forth into water or on land that is usable is contemptible.

92. One should not eat with a full mouth, noisily, or with the mouth wide open. One should not sit with one's legs outstretched; and one should not rub one's hands together.

93. One should not travel, lie, or sit alone with someone else's spouse. After observing and inquiring, one should forsake everything that does not please people.

94. One should not point out anything with one's finger but should respectfully show the way with one's whole right hand.

95. One should not call out to someone and wave one's arms when there is little urgency; instead, one should snap one's fingers or the like. Otherwise, one would lose composure.
96. One should lie down in the preferred direction in the lion's posture of the Lord's nirvana. One should get up quickly with vigilance and a prior determination.

97. The conduct of Bodhisattvas is described as immeasurable. One should first surely engage in practices that purify the mind.

98. Three times by day and three times by night one should recite the Triskandha. By that means one alleviates the remaining downfalls because of one's reliance on the Jinas and the Spirit of Awakening.

99. One should diligently apply oneself to the trainings that pertain to those situations in which one finds oneself, either of one's own accord or under the influence of others.

100. For there is nothing that the Children of the Jina should not learn. For the good person who behaves in this way, there is nothing that is non-virtuous.

101. One should do nothing other than benefit sentient beings either directly or indirectly; and for the sake of sentient beings alone, one should subordinate everything to Awakening.

102. Never, even at the cost of one's life, should one forsake a spiritual friend who observes the vows of a Bodhisattva and who is well versed in the matters of the Mahayana.

103. One should learn from the Srisambhavavimoksa respectful behavior toward spiritual mentors. This and other advice of the Buddha should be known through reciting the sutras.

104. The practices are found in the sutras; therefore one should recite them, and one should study the primary downfalls in the Akasagarbhasutra.

105. One should definitely study the Siksasamuccaya again and again, because good conduct is explained there in detail.

106. Alternatively, one should first look at it briefly, and then carefully read the Sutrasamuccaya composed by Arya Nagarjuna.

107. Seeing what is forbidden and what is prescribed, one should implement those teachings for the sake of protecting people's minds.

108. In brief, this alone is the definition of introspection: the repeated examination of the state of one's body and mind.

109. I shall practice it with my body. What is the use of merely reading the words? Will a sick person have any benefit merely by reading about medical treatments?
[The Perfection of Patience -- / 3 - Patience]

Meditating on patience: the faults of anger, the benefits of patience. Methods of practicing patience: preventing the causes of anger, the three progressive levels of patience and tolerance: voluntary endurance, definitively thinking about the dharma, not retaliating]

[332.222.3 Explanation of the remaining perfections – 118 to 215]
[332.222.31 How to practice patience – 119 to 138]

332.222.311 The method of meditating on patience – 120 to 122

332.222.311.1 The faults of anger - 121

1. Anger destroys all the good conduct, such as generosity and worshiping the Sugatas, that has been acquired over thousands of eons.

2. There is no vice like hatred, and there is no austerity like patience. Therefore, one should earnestly cultivate patience in various ways.

3. The mind does not find peace, nor does it enjoy pleasure and joy, nor does it find sleep or fortitude when the thorn of hatred dwells in the heart.

4. Even dependents whom one rewards with wealth and honors wish to harm the master who is repugnant due to his anger.

5. Even friends fear him. He gives, but is not served. In brief, there is nothing that can make an angry person happy.

332.222.311.2 The benefits of patience - 122

6. One who recognizes hatred as the enemy, knowing that it creates sufferings such as these, and persistently overcomes it, becomes happy in this world and in the other.

332.222.312 The method of practicing patience – 123 to 138

332.222.312.1 Preventing the cause of anger (discontent, frustration) - 124

7. Finding its fuel in discontent originating from an undesired event and from an impediment to desired events, anger becomes inflamed and destroys me.

8. Therefore, I shall remove the fuel of that enemy, for that foe has no function other than to harm me.

9. Even if I fall into extreme adversity, I should not disrupt my happiness. When there is frustration, nothing is agreeable, and virtue is forsaken.

10. If there is a remedy, then what is the use of frustration? If there is no remedy, then what is the use of frustration?
11. For loved ones and for oneself, one does not desire suffering, contempt, verbal abuse, or disgrace; but for an enemy, it is the opposite.

12. Happiness is obtained with great difficulty, whereas suffering occurs easily. Only through suffering is there release from the cycle of existence. Therefore, mind, be strong!

13. The devotees of Durga and the people of Karnata needlessly endure the pain of burns, cuts, and the like. Why then am I timid when my aim is liberation?

14. There is nothing whatsoever that remains difficult as one gets used to it. Thus, through habituation with slight pain, even great pain becomes bearable.

15. Do you not consider the pain of bugs, gadflies, and mosquitoes, of thirst and hunger, and the irritation of a serious rash and the like as insignificant?

16. Cold, heat, rain, wind, traveling, illness, captivity, and beatings should not induce a sense of fragility. Otherwise, the distress becomes greater.

17. Some, seeing their own blood, show extraordinary valor, while some faint even at the sight of others' blood.

18. That comes from mental fortitude or from timidity. Therefore, one should become invincible to suffering, and surmount pain.

19. Not even in suffering should a wise person disrupt his mental serenity, for the battle is with the mental afflictions; and in battle pain is easily obtained.

20. Those who conquer the enemy while receiving the enemies' blows on the chest are the victorious heroes. The rest just kill the dead.

21. Suffering has another quality since arrogance diminishes because of despair, and one feels compassion for beings in the cycle of existence, fear of sin, and a yearning for the Jina.

22. I am not angered at bile and the like even though they cause great suffering. Why be angry at sentient beings, who are also provoked to anger by conditions?

23. Just as sharp pain arises although one does not desire it, so anger forcibly arises although one does not desire it.

24. A person does not intentionally become angry, thinking, "I shall get angry," nor does anger originate, thinking, "I shall arise."

25. All offenses and vices of various kinds arise under the influence of conditions, and they do not arise independently.
26. An assemblage of conditions does not have the intention, "I shall produce," nor does that which is produced have the intention, "I shall be produced."

27. That which is regarded as the Primal Substance and that which is construed as the Self (Atman) do not originate, thinking, "I shall come into being."

28. Since it has not arisen, how could it wish to come into existence? Since it engages with objects, it cannot strive to cease either.

29. If the permanent Self is not sentient, it is obviously inactive like space. Even in conjunction with conditions, what activity does the immutable have?

30. What is the use of action to the Self which at the time of action is the same as it was before? If the relationship is that it has action, then which of the two is the cause of the other?

31. Thus, everything is dependent on something else, and even that on which something is dependent is not autonomous. Hence, why would one get angry at things that are inactive, like apparitions?

32. [Qualm:] Averting anger is inappropriate, for who averts what? [Response:] That is appropriate, because it is a state of dependent origination and is considered to be the cessation of suffering.

33. Therefore, upon seeing a friend or an enemy committing a wrong deed, one should reflect, "Such are his conditions," and be at ease.

34. If all beings would find fulfillment according to their own wishes, then no one would suffer, for no one wishes to suffer.

35. People hurt themselves with thorns and the like out of negligence, with fasting and so on out of anger, and by desiring to obtain inaccessible women and so forth.

36. Some kill themselves by hanging, by jumping from cliffs, by eating poison or unwholesome substances, and by non-virtuous conduct.

37. When under the influence of mental afflictions, they kill even their own dear selves in this way; then how could they have restraint toward the bodies of others?

38. If you do not even have compassion toward those who, intoxicated by mental afflictions, commit suicide, then why does anger arise?

39. If inflicting harm on others is the nature of the foolish, then my anger toward them is as inappropriate as it would be toward fire, which has the nature of burning.
40. If this fault is adventitious and if sentient beings are good by nature, then anger toward them is inappropriate as it would be toward pungent smoke in the sky.

41. Disregarding the principal cause, such as a stick and the like, if I become angry with the one who impels it, then it is better if I hate hatred, because that person is also impelled by hatred.

42. In the past, I too have inflicted such pain on sentient beings; therefore, I, who have caused harm to sentient beings, deserve that in return.

43. Both his weapon and my body are causes of suffering. He has obtained a weapon, and I have obtained a body. With what should I be angry?

44. Blinded by craving, I have obtained this boil that appears as a human body, which cannot bear to be touched. When there is pain, with whom should one be angry?

45. I do not desire suffering; yet, fool that I am, I desire the cause of suffering. When suffering emerges due to my own fault, why should I be angry with anyone else?

46. Just as the forest of razor-leaves and the birds of hell are brought into existence by my actions, so is this. With whom should I be angry?

47. Those who hurt me are impelled by my actions, as a result of which they will go to the infernal realms. Surely, it is I alone who have ruined them.

48. On account of them, many vices of mine diminish through forbearance. On account of me, they enter the infernal realms with long-lasting agonies.

49. It is I alone who harm them, and they are my benefactors. Wicked mind, why do you misconstrue this and become angry?

50. If there is virtue in my intention, I will not enter the infernal realms. If I protect myself, what will happen to them here?

51. If I were to retaliate, they would not be protected and my conduct would be impaired. Because of that, those in anguish would be lost.

52. Because of its immateriality, the mind can never be harmed by anyone. However, due to its attachment to the body, the mind is tormented by suffering.

53. Neither contempt, abusive speech, nor disgrace harms the body. Why then, mind, do you become angry?

54. Will the unkindness of others toward me devour me in this life or another, that I am so averse to it?

55. If I am averse to it because it hinders my material gain, my acquisitions will vanish in this life, but my sin will surely remain.

56. It is better that I die today than have a long, corrupt life. For even after living a long time, I shall have the suffering of death.
57. One person wakes up after enjoying a hundred years of pleasure in sleep, and another person wakes up after being happy for a moment.

58. Does happiness return to either once they have awakened? It is the same at the time of death for one who lives a long time and for one who lives a short time.

59. Even though I have acquired many possessions and have enjoyed pleasures for a long time, I shall depart empty-handed and naked as if I had been robbed.

60. What if I destroy vice and perform virtue while living off my acquisitions? Do vice and the destruction of virtue not occur for one who gets angry on account of material gains?

61. If the meaning of my life vanishes, then what is the point of a life that creates only non-virtue?

62. If you think that your hatred toward one who disparages you is because he drives away sentient beings, why does your anger not arise also when others are defamed in the same way?

63. You have patience toward those who are unkind because their ungracious behavior is directed toward someone else, but you do not have patience toward one who disparages you when he is subject to the arising of mental afflictions.

64. My hatred toward those who revile and violate images, stupas, and the sublime Dharma is wrong, because the Buddhas and the like are free of distress.

65. As in the preceding case, one should ward off anger toward those who injure spiritual mentors, relatives, and friends, by seeing this as arising from conditions.

66. Harm is certainly inflicted on beings either by sentient beings or non-sentient things. This distress is felt in a sentient being, so endure that pain.

67. Some do wrong out of delusion, while others, being deluded, become angry. Among them, whom do we call innocent, and whom do we call guilty?

68. Why did I previously act in such a way that now I am harmed by others? All are subject to their actions. Who am I to alter this?

69. Realizing this, I shall strive for virtues in such a way that all will have loving thoughts toward each other.

70. When fire spreads from one burning house to another, one should bundle up the straw and the like, take it out, and discard it.

71. Likewise, when the mind burns with the fire of hatred due to attachment, one should immediately cast it aside because of the fear of burning the body of merit.

72. If one who is to be executed has a hand amputated and is released, is this unfortunate? If a person is freed from hell by human suffering, is this unfortunate?

73. If one is unable to endure even this slight suffering of the present, then why does one not ward off anger which is the cause of pain in hell?
Thus, solely due to anger I have brought myself into hells thousands of times, and I have not brought about benefit for myself or others.

But this suffering is not of that kind, and it will bring about great benefit. Only delight in suffering that eliminates the suffering of the world is appropriate here.

If others find pleasure and joy in praising the abundance of someone's good qualities, why, mind, do you not praise it and delight in this way, too?

This joy from your rejoicing is a blameless source of happiness. It is not prohibited by the virtuous ones, and it is the most excellent way to attract others.

If you do not like it, thinking that it is a pleasure for that person only, then if you were to stop giving wages and the like, your seen and unseen reward would be destroyed.

When your own good qualities are being praised, you want others to rejoice as well. When good qualities of someone else are being praised, you do not want happiness even for yourself.

Upon generating the Spirit of Awakening out of the desire for the happiness of all sentient beings, why are you angry at sentient beings now that they have found happiness themselves? (jealousy)

If you desire sentient beings' Buddhahood, which is worshiped in the three worlds, then why are you burned up when you see them slightly honored?

One who nurtures a person whom you should nurture is making you a gift. Upon finding a person who supports your family, are you not delighted, but angry?

What does one who wishes Awakening for sentient beings not wish for them? How can one who becomes angry at others' prosperity have the Spirit of Awakening?

If someone does not receive that gift and if it remains in the house of the benefactor, then you do not have it anyway. So what use is it to you, whether it is given away or not?

Why would you have him ward off merits, kind people, and his own good qualities? Let him not accept when he is being given something? Say, at what are you angry?

Not only do you not repent for sins you have committed, but you also wish to compete with others who have performed virtues.

If something unpleasant happens to your enemy, would your satisfaction make it happen again? It would not happen merely due to your desire, without a cause.

Even if it is brought about by your desire, would you find happiness in his suffering? Even if there were advantage in it for you, what other disadvantage would come out of it?

For this horrible fishhook is cast by the fishermen, the mental afflictions, from whom the guardians of hells will buy you and will stew you in infernal cauldrons.

Praise, fame, and honor are not conducive to my merit, long life, strength, health, or physical well-being.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>91.</th>
<th>The wise person who knows what is best for himself would find benefit in these. One desiring mental happiness would pursue drinking, gambling, and the like.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>92.</td>
<td>For the sake of fame, some sacrifice their wealth and even kill themselves. Can words be eaten? And when one dies, who feels that pleasure?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>93.</td>
<td>At the loss of praise and fame, my own mind appears to me just like a child who wails in distress when its sand castle is destroyed.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>94.</td>
<td>Since a word is not sentient, it cannot praise me. But knowing that someone likes me is a cause of my delight.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>95.</td>
<td>Whether it is for someone else or for me, what good to me is the affection of another? That joy of affection belongs only to that person. Not even a tiny fraction of that belongs to me.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>96.</td>
<td>If I take pleasure in that person's pleasure, then I should take it in every single case. Why am I unhappy when others are made happy through their favor for someone else?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>97.</td>
<td>Therefore, it is because I am being praised that pleasure arises in me. But due to such absurdity, this is nothing more than the behavior of a child.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>98.</td>
<td>Praise and so forth obliterate my peace and disillusionment with the cycle of existence. They stir up jealousy toward gifted people, and anger at their success.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>99.</td>
<td>Therefore, are those conspiring to destroy my reputation and so forth not protecting me from falling into hell?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>100.</td>
<td>The bondage of acquisition and honor is unfitting for me who seeks liberation. How can I hate those who are freeing me from bondage?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>101.</td>
<td>How can I hate those who, as if due to the Buddha's blessing, block the gate as I seek to enter suffering?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>102.</td>
<td>It is wrong to feel anger toward someone, thinking that person impedes my merit. As there is no austerity equal to patience, shall I not abide in that?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>103.</td>
<td>If on account of my own fault I do not practice patience here, then I myself have created an obstacle when grounds for merit have been presented.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>104.</td>
<td>If one thing does not exist without another, and does exist when the other is present, then that other thing is its cause. How can that be called a hindrance?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>105.</td>
<td>For a supplicant is not a hindrance to generosity at the time of almsgiving; and when a person who bestows an ordination arrives, he is not called a hindrance to the ordination.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>106.</td>
<td>Beggars are easy to meet in the world, but malefactors are difficult to find, for no one will wrong me when I do no wrong.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>107.</td>
<td>Therefore, since my adversary assists me in my Bodhisattva way of life, I should long for him like a treasure discovered in the house and acquired without effort.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Thus, he and I have obtained this fruit of patience. It should be given to him first, for patience is caused by him.

If an adversary does not deserve respect because his intention was not that I accomplish patience, then why is the sublime Dharma honored? It too has no intention to be a cause of that achievement.

If an adversary is not respected because his intention is to cause harm, then for what other reason would I have patience toward him, if he is like a physician who is intent on my well-being?

Thus, patience arises only in dependence on that malicious intention, so he alone is a cause of my patience. I should respect him just like the sublime Dharma.

The Sage has declared that the field of sentient beings is the field of the Jinas, because many have reached the highest fulfillment by honoring them.

As the attainment of the Buddha’s qualities is equally due to sentient beings and to the Jinas, how is it that I do not respect sentient beings as I do the Jinas?

Their greatness is not in terms of their intention but in terms of the result itself. The greatness of sentient beings is comparable to that, so they are equal.

A friendly disposition, which is honorable, is the very greatness of sentient beings. The merit due to faith in the Buddhas is the very greatness of the Buddhas.

Therefore, sentient beings are equal to the Jinas in their share in the acquisition of the qualities of the Buddha; but none of them are equal to the Buddhas, who are oceans of good qualities with endless portions.

If even a minute good quality of those who are a unique collection of the essence of good qualities is found in someone, not even the three worlds would be enough to honor that one.

Sentient beings have the best portion of emerging qualities of a Buddha. One should honor sentient beings in accordance with that share.

Apart from respecting sentient beings, what other repayment to true friends, the immeasurable benefactors, is possible?

One should render only service to those for whose sake they cut apart their bodies and enter the Avici hell. Therefore, one should treat people kindly even though they inflict great harm.

Why do I generate pride and not act like a servant toward those masters for whose sake my Lords have no regard for their own selves?

By pleasing those in whose happiness the Lords of Sages find delight and in whose pain they experience grief, all the Lords of Sages are gratified; and to wrong them is to wrong the Sages.

Just as there is no mental pleasure in all sensual gratification whatsoever when one’s body is on fire, likewise there is no way for the Compassionate Ones to be happy when sentient beings are in pain.
124. Therefore, whatever pain I have brought to all those of great compassion by harming sentient beings, that sin I now confess. May the Sages forgive that which has aggrieved them.

125. In order to please the Tathagatas, today with my entire being I place myself in the service of the world. Let streams of people step on my head and strike me down. May the Protector of the World be pleased.

126. There is no doubt whatsoever that those Compassionate Beings regard all beings as themselves. Are they not seen as the Protectors in the form of sentient beings? Why then is there disrespect for them?

127. This alone is pleasing to the Tathagatas. This alone is the accomplishment of one's own goal. This alone removes the suffering of the world. Therefore, let this alone be my resolve.

128. When some king's man tyrannizes the populace, the farsighted among them cannot retaliate, because that man is not alone and his power is the king's power. So one should not disparage any weak person who has done wrong.

129. Since his power is the guardians of hell and the Compassionate Ones. Therefore, one should please sentient beings, just as a servant would a hot-tempered king.

130. What could an angry king do that would equal the anguish of hell, experienced as a result of inflicting mental pain on sentient beings?

131. What could a gratified king give that would equal Buddhahood, experienced as a result of delighting sentient beings?

132. Let alone future Buddhahood, do you not see that in this life, fortune, fame, and happiness ensue from pleasing sentient beings?

133. While transmigrating, a patient person attains beauty, health, charisma, long life, and the abundant joy of a Cakravarti.
[CHAPTER VII – The Perfection of Zeal (4)]

[The Perfection of Zeal -- / 4 - Effort]

[The opponent of effort: the three types of laziness: indolence, being attracted to unwholesome actions, discouragement. The four powers to increase the force of effort: aspiration, steadfastness, joy, rejection (letting go).]

[332.222.32 HOW TO PRACTICE EFFORT – 139 to 159]

[332.222.321 Exhortation to practice effort - 140]

1. Thus, one who has patience should cultivate zeal, because Awakening is established with zeal, and there is no merit without zeal, just as there is no movement without wind.

[332.222.322 Recognizing effort - 141]

2. What is zeal? It is enthusiasm for virtue. What is said to be its antithesis? It is spiritual sloth, clinging to the reprehensible, apathy, and self-contempt.

[332.222.323 Eliminating the opponent of effort (laziness) – 142 to 150]

3. Spiritual sloth arises from indolence, indulging in pleasures, sleep, and craving for lounging around due to one's apathy toward the miseries of the cycle of existence.

4. Scented out by the hunters, the mental afflictions, you have entered the snare of rebirth. Why do you not recognize even now that you are in the mouth of death?

5. You do not see that those of your own kind are gradually being killed. You even fall asleep like a buffalo among butchers.

6. When Yama watches you and your path is blocked on all sides, how can you enjoy eating, and how can you sleep and have sexual intercourse?

7. Since death will come swiftly, with its implements prepared, what will you do then even if you have abandoned spiritual sloth at this wrong time?

8. Thinking: "I have not achieved this. I have just started this, but it remains half-done. Death has suddenly arrived. Oh, I am wretched,"

9. Seeing despondent relatives with their eyes swollen and red, with tears on their faces from the impact of their grief and the faces of the messengers of Yama,

10. Tormented by the recollection of your own vices, hearing the sounds of hell, and befouling your body with excrement out of fear, what will you do when you are so terrified?

11. Realizing "I am like a live fish," your fear is appropriate now. How much more when you have committed vices and face the intense suffering of hell?
12. So, delicate one, you burn even when touched by hot water. Upon performing deeds leading to hell, how will you remain at ease?

13. You expect results with no effort. So delicate you are and in so much pain. While in the clutches of death, you act like an immortal. Hey, miserable one, you are destroying yourself!

14. Upon finding the boat of human birth now, cross the great river of suffering. O fool, there is no time for sleep, for this boat is hard to catch again.

15. Forsaking the supreme joy of Dharma, which is an endless stream of joy, how can you delight in frivolity and jokes, which are two causes of suffering?

16. The absence of apathy, the array of abilities such as prudence, self-control, equality between oneself and others, and exchange of oneself for others

17. Should be practiced without the discouragement of thinking, "How could I possibly attain Awakening?" For the truth-speaking Tathagata proclaimed this truth:

18. "Even those who were gadflies, mosquitoes, bees, and worms attained supreme Awakening, which is difficult to attain, through the power of their effort."

19. Human by birth and capable of knowing what is beneficial and what is not, why could I not attain Awakening as long as I do not forsake the guidance of the Omniscient One?

20. If I fear, thinking, "I shall have to sacrifice my arms, legs, and the like," I may confuse the important with the insignificant due to my lack of discrimination.

21. For countless millions of eons I shall be cut, pierced, burned, and split open many times, but Awakening will not occur.

22. However, this limited suffering of mine, which yields perfect Awakening, is like the suffering of extraction when removing the pain of an embedded splinter.

23. All physicians cure with unpleasant treatments. Therefore, to destroy a multitude of pains, a slight one must be endured.

24. Although such treatment is customary, the Supreme Physician does not give it. He cures chronic diseases with gentle treatment.

25. At the beginning, the Guide prescribes giving vegetables and the like. One does it gradually so that later one can give away even one’s own flesh.

26. When insight arises that one’s own flesh is like a vegetable, then what difficulty is there in giving away one’s flesh and bone?

27. On account of abandoning vices, one does not suffer, and on account of being wise, one does not become troubled in mind; for mental pain is due to false conceptions, and bodily pain is due to sinful actions.

28. The body is well on account of merit; and the mind is joyful on account of wisdom. What can afflict a compassionate one who stays in the cycle of existence for the sake of others?
29. Extinguishing previous vices and accumulating oceans of merit, owing to the power of the Spirit of Awakening alone, one moves ahead of the Sravakas.

30. Upon mounting the chariot of the Spirit of Awakening, which carries away all despondency and weariness, what sensible person would despair at progressing in this way from joy to joy?

31. The powers of aspiration, steadfastness, delight, and letting go are for the sake of accomplishing the benefit of sentient beings. Out of fear of suffering, one should generate that aspiration as one contemplates its blessings.

32. Uprooting its opposite in this way, one should strive to increase one’s zeal with the powers of aspiration, self-confidence, delight, letting go, dedication, and determination.

33. I must eliminate immeasurable faults for myself and for others. While the eradication of every single fault may take myriads of eons,

34. There I do not see even a small fraction of a beginning of the elimination of faults. Why does my heart not burst open when I am to be allotted immeasurable suffering?

35. I must acquire many good qualities for myself and for others; otherwise, the cultivation of every single good quality may not take place in myriads of eons.

36. I have never trained in even a small fraction of good qualities. It is astonishing that this life, which I have somehow obtained, has been spent in vain.

37. I have not found joy in great festivals and offerings to the Blessed One. I have not paid my respect to the teaching, nor have I fulfilled the hopes of the poor.

38. I have not granted fearlessness to the frightened, nor have I comforted the distressed. I became a spear in the womb just for my mother to suffer.

39. Due to my former lack of aspiration for Dharma, such a disaster has befallen me now. Who would forsake the aspiration for Dharma?

40. The Sage declared that aspiration is a root of all virtues, and the root of that is constantly meditating on the results of the maturation of karma.

41. Miseries, depressions, various fears, and impediments to their desires befall those who do evil.

42. Wherever the heart’s desire of those who perform virtue goes, there its own merits honor it with an offering of its results.

43. But wherever the desire for happiness of the evil-doers goes, there vices destroy it with weapons of sufferings.
44. On account of their virtues, the Children of the Sugata, who dwell in the hearts of spacious, fragrant, and cool lotuses, whose splendor is enhanced with the nourishment of the sweet voice of the Jina, and whose handsome bodies emerge from the lotuses blossomed by the rays of the Sage, are born in the presence of the Sugata.

45. On account of non-virtues, one cries out in distress, one's entire skin is ripped away by the agents of Yama, one's body is immersed into copper melted by the heat of fire, pieces of one's flesh are cut off by hundreds of strokes of blazing spears and swords, and one repeatedly falls on intensely heated iron grounds.

46. Therefore, one should nurture an aspiration for virtue, cultivating it with reverence. Once one has begun, one should cultivate self-confidence according to the method discussed in the Vajmdhvajasutra.

47. After first examining one’s means, one should either begin or not begin. Surely, it is better not to begin than to turn back once one has begun.

48. This habit continues even in another life; and due to that sin, suffering increases. Another opportunity for action is lost, and the task is not accomplished.

49. One should apply self-confidence to these three: actions, secondary mental afflictions, and ability. "I alone should do it" expresses self-confidence with regard to action.

50. This world overwhelmed by mental afflictions is incapable of accomplishing its own self-interest. Therefore, I must do it for them. I am not as incapable as the world is.

51. Why should someone else do inferior work while I stand by? If I do not do it because of pride, then it is better to let my pride be destroyed.

52. Even a crow behaves like a garuda when attacking a dead water snake. If my mind is weak, even a small adversity is troubling.

53. When one is made powerless by despondency, adversities are easily caused, but one who is uplifted and zealous is invincible even in the face of great adversities.

54. Therefore, with an unswerving mind, I shall bring disaster to adversity. For as long as I am conquered by adversities, my desire for victory over the three worlds is ludicrous.

55. I should overcome everything and not be overcome by anything. I should acquire this self-confidence, for I am a Child of the Lions, the Jinas.

56. Beings who are overcome by pride are wretched and not self-confident; they are under the power of the enemy, pride. A self-confident person does not succumb to the power of the enemy.

57. Led by pride to miserable states of existence, they are devoid of joy even in human life. They are slaves who eat others' morsels, stupid, ugly, and feeble.

58. They are despised everywhere, puffed up with pride, and miserable. If they are included among the self-confident, they are pitiable. Say, of what kind are they?
59. They are self-confident and victorious heroes who bear their self-confidence in order to conquer the enemy, pride. Upon killing that growing enemy, pride, they demonstrate the fruit of their victory to the world as they please.

60. Abiding amidst a multitude of mental afflictions, one should be vigorous in a thousand ways and unconquerable by the hosts of mental afflictions, like a lion by a herd of deer.

61. Even in great troubles, the eye does not perceive flavor. Likewise, upon encountering difficulty, one should not be overcome by mental afflictions.

62. One should diligently apply oneself to the action in which one engages. Intoxicated by that action, one should be of an insatiable mind, like one striving for the satisfaction of the result of a game.

63. An action is performed for the sake of happiness, and yet happiness may or may not occur. But how can one who delights in action itself be happy when inactive?

64. In the cycle of existence, there is no satisfaction in sensual desires, which are like honey on a razor's edge. How can there be satiation with the nectar of merits, which are sweet in their maturation and beneficial?

65. Therefore, even upon the completion of an action, one should immerse oneself in it again, just as an elephant, scorched by the midday sun, immediately approaches a lake.

66. And when one's strength begins to decline, one should quit so that one can re-engage later. When a task has been well completed, one should leave it with the desire for more and more.

67. One should ward off the blows of mental afflictions and severely attack them, as if engaged in a sword-combat with a trained enemy.

68. Just like one would quickly, fearfully pick up a dropped sword, so should one pick up the dropped sword of mindfulness, while bearing the hells in mind.

69. Just as poison spreads throughout the body once it has reached the blood, so does a fault spread throughout the mind once it has reached a vulnerable spot.

70. A practitioner should be like someone carrying a jar of oil while under the scrutiny of swordsmen, careful of stumbling out of fear of death.

71. Therefore, just as one quickly jumps up when a snake creeps onto one's lap, so should one swiftly counteract the advent of drowsiness and sloth.

72. At every single disgrace, one should burn with remorse and ponder: "How shall I act so that this does not happen to me again?"
73. One should seek for companionship or for an appointed task with this motive: "How may I practice mindfulness in these circumstances?"

74. Bringing to mind the teaching on conscientiousness, one should arouse oneself so that one is always prepared before encountering a task.

75. Just as cotton is swayed in the direction of the wind's coming and going, so should one surrender oneself to one's enthusiasm, and in this way one's supernormal powers will thrive.

75 verses
[CHAPTER VIII – The Perfection of Meditation (5)]

[The Perfection of Meditation -- / 5 - Concentration]

[332.222.33 How to practice the concentration of tranquil abiding – 160 to 198]

[332.222.331 Reasons for attaining tranquil abiding - 161]

1. Upon developing zeal in that way, one should stabilize the mind in meditative concentration (i.e. Samatha), since a person whose mind is distracted lives between the fangs of mental afflictions.

[332.222.332 Exhortation to abandon the opponents to tranquil abiding - 162]

2. With bodily and mental seclusion, distraction does not arise. Therefore, upon renouncing the world, one should renounce discursive thoughts.

[332.222.333 How to abandon the opponents to tranquil abiding (physical and mental solitude) – 163 to 171]

[332.222.333.1 Recognizing the causes of one’s attachment to worldly life (seeking physical solitude) - 164]

3. On account of attachment and craving for gain and the like, one does not renounce the world. Thus, upon forsaking them, the wise should contemplate in this way.

[332.222.333.2 Recognizing the opponent to one’s attachment to worldly life - 165]

4. Realizing that one who is well endowed with insight through quiescence eradicates mental afflictions, one should first seek quiescence. Quiescence is due to detachment toward the world and due to joy.

[332.222.333.3 How to cultivate the opponent to attachment – 166 to 168]

[332.222.333.31 Abandoning attachment to sentient beings - 167]

5. For what impermanent person, who will not see his loved ones again in thousands of births, is it appropriate to be attached to impermanent beings?

6. Failing to see them, one does not find joy nor does one abide in meditative concentration. Even upon seeing them, one does not become satisfied but is tormented by strong desire, just as before.

7. One does not perceive reality and loses disillusionment with the cycle of existence. One is consumed by that grief—desire for the company of the beloved.

8. Because of thinking of that person, life ever so swiftly passes in vain. Due to a transient entity, the eternal Dharma is lost.

9. One who acts in the same manner as foolish people definitely goes to a miserable state of existence. They do not like someone who is different. What is gained from association with fools?
10. One moment they are friends, and the next moment they are enemies. On an occasion for being pleased, they become angry. Ordinary people are difficult to gratify.

11. When given good advice, they become angry; and they turn me away from good advice. If they are not listened to, they become angry and go to a miserable state of existence.

12. They feel envy toward a superior, competitiveness with a peer, arrogance toward one who is inferior, conceit due to praise, and anger due to reproach. When could there be any benefit from a fool?

13. Between one fool and another, something non-virtuous is inevitable, such as glorification of one’s own self, speaking ill of others, and conversation about the pleasures of the cycle of existence.

14. Thus, on account of one’s association with someone else, one encounters adversity. I shall happily live alone with a non-afflicted mind.

15. One should flee far from a fool. One should gratify the encountered person with pleasantries, not with the intention of intimacy, but in the manner of a kind and impartial person.

16. Taking only what benefits Dharma, like a bee taking nectar from a flower, I shall live everywhere without acquaintance, as if I had not existed before.

17. A mortal who thinks, "I am rich and respected, and many like me," experiences fear of approaching death.

18. Wherever the mind, infatuated by pleasures, finds enjoyment, there a thousandfold suffering arises and falls to one’s share.

19. Hence, the wise should not desire it. Fear arises from desire, yet it passes away by itself. Generate fortitude and look at it with indifference.

20. Many have become wealthy and many have become famous, but no one knows where they have gone with their wealth and fame.

21. If others despise me, why should I rejoice when praised? If others praise me, why should I be despondent when reviled?

22. If sentient beings of different dispositions have not been satisfied by the Jinas themselves, then how could they be by an ignorant person like myself? So, what is the point of attending to the world? (i.e. We are not ready now to be a Bodhisattva among people. It is better to seek solitude.)

23. They revile a person without acquisitions and despise a person with acquisitions. How can those whose company is by nature suffering bring forth joy?

24. The Tathagatas have said that a fool is no one’s friend, because the affection of a fool does not arise without self-interest.
L3: [332.222.333.5 Benefits of seeking solitude - 170]

/ 25. Love due to self-interest is love for one's own sake, just as distress at the loss of possessions is occasioned by the loss of pleasures.

/ 26. Trees do not revile nor can they be pleased with effort. When might I dwell with those whose company is a delight?

/ 27. After dwelling in an empty temple, at the foot of a tree, or in caves, when shall I set forth, unconcerned and not looking back?

/ 28. When shall I dwell in unclaimed and naturally spacious regions, wandering as I please and without a residence?

/ 29. When shall I dwell fearlessly, without protecting my body, having a clay bowl as my only property and a garment useless to a thief?

/ 30. When shall I go to the local charnel grounds and compare my own body, which has the nature of decay, with other corpses? (i.e. Once in solitude, starting with a meditation about death and impermanence)

/ 31. For this body of mine will also become so putrid that even the jackals will not come near it because of its stench.

/ 32. If the co-emergent pieces of bones of this single body will fall apart, how much more so another person whom one holds dear?

/ 33. A person is born alone and also dies alone. No one else has a share in one's agony. What is the use of loved ones who create hindrances?

/ 34. Just as one who has undertaken a journey takes lodging, so does one who travels in the cycle of existence take lodging in a rebirth.

/ 35. Until one is hoisted by four men and mourned by the world, one should retire to the forest.

/ 36. Free of intimacy and free of conflict, one is in bodily solitude. One has already died to the world and does not grieve when dying.

/ 37. No one brings one distress, attending one and grieving, nor are there any who distract one from the recollection of the Buddha and the like.

L3: [332.222.333.6 How to abandon the wild disturbances that pervert the mind (seeking mental solitude; first fighting sensuous and material desires) - 171]

/ 38. Therefore, I should always cultivate solitude, which is delightful, without difficulties, having a favorable outcome, and subduing all distractions.

/ 39. Free from all other concerns and having a single-pointed mind, I shall apply myself to meditative concentration and to the subjugation of the mind. (i.e. Once physical solitude and external calm is reached, seek mental solitude. First free from sexual and material desire.)
40. For sensuous desires create calamities in this world and the next: through imprisonment, beating, and dismemberment in this world, and in hell and the like in the next.

41. She for whom you have supplicated male and female messengers many times and for whose sake you have not considered the cost of either vice nor disgrace,

42. Throwing yourself into danger and wasting your wealth, embracing her with the greatest pleasure—

43. She is nothing but bones, indifferent and impersonal. Why do you not resort to emancipation, fully embracing it to your heart's content?

44. Either you have seen that bashfully lowered face before as being lifted up with effort, or you have not seen it as it was covered by a veil.

45. Now, that face is revealed by vultures as if they are unable to bear your anxiousness. Look at it! Why are you fleeing away now?

46. Jealous one, why do you not protect what was guarded from the glances of others, as it is being eaten now?

47. Seeing this mass of flesh being eaten by vultures and others, should you worship others' food with wreaths of flowers, sandalwood paste, and ornaments?

48. You fear a skeleton that has been seen like this, even though it does not move. Why do you not fear it when it moves as if set in motion by some ghost?

49. Their saliva and excrement arise from the same food. Why then do you dislike excrement and like sucking saliva?

50. The enamored, deluded with regard to filth, do not delight in pillows stuffed with cotton and soft to the touch because they do not emit a foul odor.

51. You had this passion for it even when it was covered, so why do you dislike it when it is uncovered? If you have no use for it, why do you caress it when covered?

52. If you have no passion for the impure, why do you embrace someone else, who is a skeleton of bones tied by sinews and smeared with a mire of flesh?

53. You have plenty of filth yourself. Be satisfied with that alone. Voracious for feces! Forget another sack of muck!

54. You desire to look at it and touch it because you like its flesh. How can you desire flesh, which by nature is devoid of consciousness?

55. The mind that you desire cannot be seen or touched; and that which can be is not conscious. Why do you embrace it in vain?

56. It is not surprising that you do not look upon another person's body as composed of filth, but it is astonishing that you do not perceive your own body as comprised of filth.
57. Apart from the delicate, muck-arisen lotus, opening under the rays of the cloudless sun, what delight is there in the cage of filth for a mind addicted to filth?

58. If you do not desire to touch soil and the like because it is smeared with excrement, how can you desire to touch the body out of which it is excreted?

59. If you do not have passion for what is impure, why do you embrace someone else, who is a seed arisen from a field of filth and nourished by it?

60. You do not desire a dirty worm originating from filth because it is small, but you desire a body that consists of much filth and is also born from filth.

61. Not only do you not abhor your own filthiness, you, voracious for excrement, long for other vessels of filth!

62. Even the ground is considered impure when savory foods, such as camphor or boiled rice and condiments, are spat out or vomited from the mouth.

63. If you do not trust that this is filth even though it is obvious, look at other bodies too, repugnant and discarded in the charnel grounds.

64. Knowing that great fear arises when the skin is torn off, how can you have attraction to that same thing again?

65. Although applied to the body, this fragrance is from sandal-wood and not from anything else. Why are you attracted to someone by the fragrance that belongs to something else?

66. If attraction does not arise due to a naturally foul smell, is that not good? Why do people take pleasure in what is worthless and anoint it with fragrance?

67. If it is sandalwood that is sweet-smelling, did it come from the body? Why is one attracted to someone because of a fragrance that belongs to something else?

68. If the naked body, containing the slime of filth, is frightening in its natural condition with its long hair and nails and stained yellowish teeth,

69. Why do you meticulously polish it like a weapon for suicide? The earth is crowned with insane people, diligent in deluding themselves.

70. Seeing a few corpses in a charnel ground, you are repelled, yet you delight in a village which is a charnel ground crowded with moving corpses.

71. Also, although this body is filth, it is not acquired without a price. For its sake there is exhaustion in earning it and there is agony in hells and the like.

72. A child is not able to earn money. When one is a youth, with what is one happy? The prime of one’s life passes away in making a living. What can an old person do with sensual gratification?

73. Some debased sensualists, exhausted by a full day’s work, come home in the evening and sleep like the dead.
74. Others are afflicted by the troubles of traveling abroad because of military expeditions. Although longing for their sons and wives, they do not see them for years on end.

75. Deluded by sensual desires, they sell themselves for that which they never acquire. Instead, their life is uselessly spent in labor for others.

76. The wives of those who have sold themselves and who always carry out commissions give birth at the feet of trees in the jungles and other inopportune places.

77. In order to make a livelihood, they enter war that endangers their lives, and they become servants for the sake of their self-respect. They are fools ridiculed for their sensual desires.

78. Some other sensualists are mutilated, fixed on a stake. They are seen being burned and slain with daggers.

79. Consider wealth as an unending misfortune because of the troubles of acquiring, protecting, and losing it. Those whose minds are attached to wealth on account of their distracted state have no opportunity for liberation from the suffering of mundane existence.

80. Thus, sensualists have much distress and little enjoyment, like a beast that has hold of a bit of grass while pulling a wagon.

81. For the sake of that bit of enjoyment, which is easily attainable even for an animal, an ill-fated one has destroyed this leisure and endowment, which is very difficult to find.

82. This exertion is constantly made for the sake of the body, which is definitely transient, insignificant, and falls into hells and the like.

83. With even a billionth part of that diligence, there can be Buddhahood. Sensualists have suffering greater than the suffering of the Path, but they have no Awakening.

84. After bringing to mind the anguish of hell and the like, neither a weapon, poison, fire, a precipice, nor enemies are comparable to sensual desires.

85. Fearing sensual desires in this way, one should generate delight in solitude and in deserted woodlands devoid of strife and annoyances.

86. The fortunate ones, caressed by silent and gentle forest breezes, pace on pleasant boulders, spacious like palaces, cooled by sandalwood-like moon rays, and ponder how to benefit others.

87. Dwelling here and there for as long as one likes, freed from the exhaustion of guarding one's possessions and free of care, one lives as one pleases in an empty dwelling, at the foot of a tree, or in a cave.

88. Living as one wishes, homeless, and not tied down by anyone, one savors the joy of contentment, which is difficult even for a king to find.
1. A suitable place, and knowing the methods
2. Having little desire for material things
3. Having contentment
4. Giving up all activities that are not related to the practice
5. Keeping pure morality
6. Abandonning all disturbing conceptions

The seven part posture:
1. Full vajra position (or half)
2. Right hand upon the left; palms up, thumbs touching above navel
3. Straight back
4. Head slightly inclined forward
5. Eyes opened slightly & gazing down (in front for Dzogchen)
6. Leveled shoulders
7. Mouth gently closed, teeth resting gently together, tip of the tongue behind the upper teeth

L4: [332.222.334.12 The nine mental abidings]

1. Placing the mind
2. Continual placement
3. Replacement
4. Close placement
5. Controlling
6. Pacifying
7. Completely pacifying
8. Single-pointedness
9. Placement in equipoise

L4: [332.222.334.13 The five obstacles to be abandoned]

1. Laziness
2. Forgetfulness
3. Mental sinking & mental excitement (groos & subtil for both)
4. Non-application
5. Unnecessary application

L4: [332.222.334.14 The eight opponents to the five obstacles]

[Against laziness Faith in tranquil abiding Aspiration to attain tranquil abiding Effort Supplesess -- flexibility Against forgetting & losing the object Mindfulness Again mental sinking and excitement Alertness Application Non-application Sinking ==> think positive & benefits, precious human life Exitement ==> think impermanence, death; use breath meditation]

L3: [332.222.334.2 Particular explanation of the use to which tranquil abiding is to be put: meditating on the equality and the exchange of self and others – 178 to 198]

L4: [332.222.334.21 How to meditate on the equality of self and others – 179 to 184]

L5: [332.222.334.211 Brief explanation of the meditation - 180]

89. After meditating on the advantages of solitude in this and other ways, having one's discursive thoughts calmed, one should cultivate the Spirit of Awakening.
90. One should first earnestly meditate on the equality of oneself and others in this way: "All equally experience suffering and happiness, and I must protect them as I do myself."

L5: [332.222.334.212 The meaning of the equality of self and others - 181]

91. Just as the body, which has many parts owing to its division into arms and so forth, should be protected as a whole, so should this entire world, which is differentiated and yet has the nature of the same suffering and happiness.

L5: [332.222.334.213 The actual meditation of the equality of self and others - 182]

92. Although my suffering does not cause pain in other bodies, nevertheless that suffering is mine and is difficult to bear because of my attachment to myself.

93. Likewise, although I myself do not feel the suffering of another person, that suffering belongs to that person and is difficult [for him] to bear because of his attachment to himself.

94. I should eliminate the suffering of others because it is suffering, just like my own suffering. I should take care of others because they are sentient beings, just as I am a sentient being.

95. When happiness is equally dear to others and myself, then what is so special about me that I strive after happiness for myself alone?

96. When fear and suffering are equally abhorrent to others and myself, then what is so special about me that I protect myself but not others?

97. If I do not protect them because I am not afflicted by their suffering, why do I protect my body from the suffering of a future body, which is not my pain?

98. The assumption that "it is the same me even then" is false; because it is one person who has died and quite another who is born.

99. If one thinks that the suffering that belongs to someone is to be warded off by that person himself, then why does the hand protect the foot when the pain of the foot does not belong to the hand?

100. If one argues that even though it is inappropriate, it happens because of grasping onto a self, our response is: With all one’s might, one should avoid that which is inappropriate, whether it belongs to oneself or to another.

101. The continuum of consciousness, like a series, and the aggregation of constituents, like an army and such, are unreal. Since one who experiences suffering does not exist, to whom will that suffering belong?

102. All sufferings are without an owner, because they are not different. They should be warded off simply because they are suffering. Why is any restriction made in this case?

103. Why should suffering be prevented? Because everyone agrees. If it must be warded off, then all of it must be warded off; and if not, then this goes for oneself as it does for everyone else.
104. [Qualm:] Much suffering comes from compassion, so why should one force it to arise? [Response:] After seeing the suffering of the world, how can this suffering from compassion be considered great?

105. If the suffering of many disappears because of the suffering of one, then a compassionate person should induce that suffering for his own sake and for the sake of others.

106. Therefore, Supuspacandra, although knowing the king's animosity, did not avoid his own suffering as a sacrifice for many people in misery.

L5: [332.222.334.214 The benefits of meditating on the equality of self and others - 183]

107. Thus, those whose mind-streams are cultivated in meditation and who equally accept the suffering of others dive into the Avici hell like swans into a pool of lotuses.

108. They become oceans of joy when sentient beings are liberated. Have they not found fulfillment? What is the use of sterile liberation? (i.e. Eliminating the tension created by the duality self vs others we immediately become very relieve and naturally happy.)

109. Thus, although working for the benefit of others, there is neither conceit nor dismay; and on account of the thirst for the single goal of benefiting others, there is no desire for the result of the maturation of one's karma.

110. Therefore, to the extent that I protect myself from disparagement, so shall I generate a spirit of protection and a spirit of compassion toward others.

L5: [332.222.334.215 ( Habituation ) The ability to develop the mind in terms of this meditation - 184]

111. Due to habituation, there is a sense that "I" exists in the drops of blood and semen that belong to others, even though the being in question does not exist. (i.e. The individual/separated ego is just an illusion; we are not separated from the world as we think we are. Our actual sense of an individual ego was created due simply to habituation; it can also be replaced by habituation. The important point is not which it is replaced (others, deity, ...), but what this would permit us to do. Due to the peace and calm that it would bring, it permits us to develop great concentration and truly liberating insights, and ultimately to transcend all ego identification. But this cannot be done on an individual basis; we are not separated from others.)

112. Why do I not also consider another's body as myself in the same way, since the otherness of my own body is not difficult to determine? (i.e. Our sense of identification to our body, or anything else, is purely a matter of habituation. It would be easy to identify ourself to something else through the same process of habituation. This also proves that the ego is dependently arisen and thus not inherently existing.)

113. Acknowledging oneself as fault-ridden and others as oceans of virtues, one should contemplate renouncing one's self-identity and accepting others. (i.e. Remembering the advantages of cherishing others, and the many disadvantages of the self-cherishing attitude – we should opt for exchanging self with others.)
114. Just as the hands and the like are cherished because they are members of the body, why are embodied beings not cherished in the same way, for they are the members of the world?

115. Just as the notion of a self with regard to one's own body, which has no personal existence, is due to habituation, will the identity of one's self with others not arise out of habituation in the same way?

116. Although working for the benefit of others in this way, there is neither conceit nor dismay. Even upon feeding oneself, expectation of a reward does not arise.

117. Therefore, just as you wish to protect yourself from pain, grief, and the like, so may you cultivate a spirit of protection and a spirit of compassion toward the world.

118. Therefore the protector Avalokita empowered his own name to remove even one's fear arising from timidity in front of an audience.

119. One should not turn away from difficulty, since owing to the power of habituation, one may have no pleasure in the absence of something that one previously feared to hear mentioned. (i.e. One who was an enemy may turn to be our best friend simply due to habituation.)

120. One who wishes to protect oneself and others quickly should practice exchanging oneself for others, which is a great mystery. (i.e. Morality is about protecting oneself and others; not hurting oneself and other; thus it is derived from cherishing others. All about realizing that we are interdependent, and need to cooperate.)

121. If even at a small danger fear arises on account of great attachment to oneself, why would one not abhor that self like a terrifying enemy?

122. One who kills birds, fish, and deer and sets up an ambush with the desire to quell illness, thirst, and hunger,

123. One who kills one's parents and steals the property of the Three Jewels for the sake of profit and respect, will become fuel in the Avici hell.

124. What wise person would desire, protect, and venerate such a self? Who would not see it as an enemy and who would respect it? (i.e. The ego, the duality self vs others, is the source of all immorality / mental perturbations and sins, of all causes of suffering.)
/ 125. If out of concern for oneself one thinks: "If I give it away, what shall I enjoy?" this is a fiendish state. If out of concern for others one thinks: "If I enjoy it, what shall I give away?" this is a divine state.

/ 126. Upon harming another for one’s own sake, one is burnt in hells and the like; but upon afflicting oneself for the sake of others, one has success in everything.

/ 127. The desire for self-aggrandizement leads to a miserable state of existence, low status, and stupidity. By transferring that same desire to someone else, one obtains a fortunate state of existence, respect, and wisdom.

/ 128. By ordering another around for one’s own sake, one experiences the position of a servant and the like; but by ordering oneself around for the sake of others, one experiences the position of a master and the like.

/ 129. All those who are unhappy in the world are so as a result of their desire for their own happiness. All those who are happy in the world are so as a result of their desire for the happiness of others. (i.e. Remember the goal of this method (upaya) is to create the proper conditions – this precious human life with enough calm, happiness, concentration—to be able to develop truly liberating insights. It is efficient because it is more in accord with the real nature of everything, non-duality or interdependence and emptiness, than our usual self-cherishing where we think we have an ego independent or the rest of the world, and that we are in opposition (duality) with the world. But it is only another method. We should keep the Middle Way and not jump to the extreme here. We are not different or separate, but still not the same.)

/ 130. Enough of much talk! Note the difference between the fool who seeks his own benefit and the sage who works for the benefit of others.

/ 131. One who does not exchange his own happiness for the suffering of others surely does not achieve Buddhahood. How could one find happiness even in the cycle of existence?

/ 132. Not to mention the next life, even in this life, a desired goal of a servant who does not do his work and of a master who does not pay out the wages cannot be accomplished.

/ 133. Forsaking the generation of mutual happiness and the felicity of present and future happiness, deluded people take on tremendous suffering because of harming one another.

/ 134. If the whole range of adversities, sufferings, and fears in the world arises from grasping onto the self, what use is this grasping to me?

/ 135. Without forsaking one’s own self, one cannot avoid suffering, just as without avoiding fire one cannot avoid being burned.

/ 136. Therefore, in order to alleviate my own suffering and to alleviate the suffering of others, I give myself up to others and I accept others as my own self.

/ 137. O mind, make this resolve: "I am bound to others." From now on you must not be concerned with anything but the welfare of all sentient beings.
138. It is inappropriate to seek one's own welfare with the eyes and so on that are dedicated to others. It is inappropriate to pour one's own benefit with hands that are dedicated to others.

139. Therefore, becoming subservient to sentient beings and snatching away whatever you see on this body, use it for the well-being of others.

140. Placing your own identity in inferior ones and placing the identity of others in your own self, cultivate envy and pride with the mind free of discursive thoughts.

141. He is respected, not I. I am not wealthy as he is. He is praised, while I am despised. I am unhappy, while he is happy.

142. I do chores while he lives at ease. It seems he is great in the world, while I am debased, lacking good qualities.

143. What can one do without good qualities? Every person is endowed with good qualities. There are those with regard to whom I am inferior, and there are those with regard to whom I am superior.

144. Due to the power of mental afflictions, the degeneration of my views and ethical discipline is not under my control. I must be cured as far as possible. I even accept the pain.

145. If he cannot cure me, why does he disdain me? What use are his good qualities to me when he is one who has good qualities?

146. He has no compassion for beings who dwell in the jaws of the beast of prey of miserable states of existence. Moreover, out of pride in his qualities, he desires to surpass the wise.

147. Seeing himself as being equal to others, in order to enhance his own superiority, he will obtain wealth and respect for himself even by means of discord.

148. Were my good qualities to become apparent to everyone in the world, then no one would even hear of his good qualities.

149. Were my faults to be concealed, there would be honor for me and not for him. Today, I have easily acquired possessions. I am honored while he is not.

150. Delighted, we shall watch him as he is finally being ill-treated, ridiculed, and reviled from all sides.
151. Also, it seems this wretched one is competing with me. Does he have this much learning, wisdom, beauty, noble ancestry, and wealth?

152. Hearing my own good qualities being praised everywhere in this way, thrilled, with my hair standing on end, I shall enjoy the delight of happiness.

153. Even though he has wealth, we should forcibly seize it from him and give him mere sustenance if he works for us.

154. We should deprive him of happiness and always yoke him to our anguish.

154cd We all have been afflicted in the cycle of existence hundreds of times by him.

155. Countless eons have passed away while you sought your own benefit. With this great toil you have gained only suffering.

156. At my request, apply yourself in this way right now without hesitation. Later you will see the advantages of this, for the words of the Sage are true.

157. If you had carried out this task earlier, this state deprived of the perfection and bliss of the Buddha would not have occurred.

158. Therefore, just as you formed a sense of self-identity with regard to the drops of blood and semen of others, contemplate others in the same way. (i.e. Through habituation, through repeated practice of putting yourselves into other’s shoes.)

159. Living as one who belongs to others and snatching away whatever you see on this body, practice what is beneficial for others.

160. Arouse envy toward your own self in this way: I am well while the other is miserable; the other is lowly while I am exalted; the other works while I do not. (i.e. “We should think: I am happy, but others are sad. I have a high position, but others are low. I give benefit to myself, but not to others. What is the point of being concerned only for my own happiness like this? Why don’t I feel jealous of myself and express true love to others?”)

161. Deprive yourself of happiness and expose yourself to the suffering of others. Examine your pretence in this way: "What do I do at what time?" (i.e. "Having reflected upon these questions well, we should make the following strong determination: Why should I continue holding onto my faulty attitudes? I must instead separate myself from my happiness, give it to others and take their suffering upon myself. I should examine all my actions for faults and constantly ask myself why I am behaving the way I do." -- So we should always be conscious of our motivation and actions, and instead of just comparing them to some moral codes, we should always put ourselves in other’s shoes and think what is the best for them from their own point of view.)

162. Take the mistake made by another on your head, and disclose even a trivial mistake of yours to the Great Sage.

163. Cover up your own fame with accounts of surpassing glory of others, and drive yourself, like a despised slave, into works for sentient beings.
164. This one should not be praised for a trace of an adventitious good quality, for he is full of faults. Act so that no one may know of your good qualities.

165. In brief, whatever offence you have committed toward others for your own benefit, let it descend on yourself for the benefit of sentient beings.

166. This one should not be encouraged to be abusive, but should be established in the behavior of a young bride, modest, meek, and restrained.

L6: [Talking to one’s own mind:]

167. Act in this way! Remain in this way! You should not do this! You should be subjugated and subdued in this way if you disobey.

168. O mind, if you do not do this even when you are being told, then I shall subjugate you alone, for all faults dwell in you.

169. Where will you go? I can see you, and I shall annihilate all your vanities. That was another, earlier time when I was ruined by you.

170. Now give up this hope: "Still, I have my own self-interest"! Unconcerned as you are with much distress, I have sold you to others.

171. If I do not joyfully offer you to sentient beings, you will undoubtedly deliver me to the guardians of hell.

172. Handing me over in that way many times, you have tormented me for a long time. Remembering those grudges, I shall destroy you, the servant of your own self-interest.

173. If you are pleased with yourself, you should take no pleasure in yourself. If you need protection, it is inappropriate to protect yourself.

L6: [The body should not be the master]

174. The more this body is pampered, the more fragile it becomes and the more it degenerates.

175. When it has degenerated in this way, not even this earth can completely fulfill its desire. Who will then satisfy its desire?

176. For one who desires the impossible, mental affliction and disappointment arise; but for one who is free of expectations, there is unblemished prosperity.

177. Therefore, free rein should not be given to the growth of bodily desires. It is truly good when one does not take something that one wants.

178. This awful, impure form has its end in ashes and stillness, moved only by another. Why do I grasp onto it as mine?

179. Of what use is this contrivance to me, whether it is dead or alive? What difference is there between this and a clump of soil and the like? Alas, you are not eliminating the grasping onto the "I"!
180. By favoring the body, one uselessly accumulates suffering. Of what use is anger or love to something equal to a piece of wood?

181. Whether it is nurtured by me or eaten by vultures, it feels neither affection nor aversion, so why am I fond of it?

182. If the body, which has no anger due to abuse nor satisfaction due to praise, is unconscious, then for whom am I exerting myself?

183. Those who like this body are said to be my friends. They all like their own bodies, too, so why do I not like them?

184. Therefore, with indifference I have given up my body for the benefit of the world. Hence, although it has many faults, I keep it as an instrument for that task.

185. So enough of worldly conduct! Recalling the teaching on conscientiousness and warding off drowsiness and lethargy, I shall follow the wise.

186. Therefore, withdrawing the mind from evil ways, I shall always concentrate it on its own meditative object to eliminate obscurations.

186 verses
L1: [CHAPTER IX – The Perfection of Wisdom (6)]

[The Perfection of Wisdom]

[332.222.34 How to practice the wisdom of superior seeing – 199 to 275]

L2: [332.222.341 Showing why those who which to attain liberation need to develop the wisdom that understands emptiness (Renunciation, moral discipline, bodhicitta, concentration are all prerequisites in order to develop Wisdom is the only true final antidote ) - 200]

/ 1. The Sage taught this entire system for the sake of wisdom. Therefore, with the desire to ward off suffering, one should develop wisdom.

L2: [332.222.342 The presentation of the Two Truths (Why we need the two truths together all the time. The Middle Way, away from all extremes. Why dependent origination alone, as taught in the Hinayana, is not enough. Or why emptiness alone is not enough. Or why everything is from the mind alone is not enough.) – 201 to 215]

L3: [332.222.342.1 The distinctions between the two truths - 202]

/ 2. This truth is recognized as being of two kinds: conventional and ultimate. Ultimate reality is beyond the scope of the intellect. The intellect is called conventional reality.

L3: [332.222.342.2 The definition of the two truths - 203]

L3: [332.222.342.3 The distinction between the individuals who determine the presentation of the two truths - 204]

/ 3. In the light of this, people are seen to be of two types: the contemplative and the ordinary person. The ordinary folks are superseded by the contemplatives.

L3: [332.222.342.4 The distinction in their varying degrees of mental capacity - 205]

/ 4. Due to the difference in their intelligence, even contemplatives are refuted by successively higher ones by means of analogies accepted by both parties, regardless of what they aim to prove.

/ 5. Ordinary people see and imagine things as real and not illusory. It is in this respect that there is disagreement between the contemplatives and the ordinary people.

L3: [332.222.342.5 Refutation of the argument that is not (Why it is) necessary to realize emptiness in order to attain liberation (from the two extremes of realism and idealism who take only one side or the other of the two inseparable truths) – 206 to 215]

L4: [332.222.342.51 A general refutation of (Why the Realist position (is not enough) (ordinary realist people who think emptiness would be in contradiction to the observed reality and its functionality; or Yogacarin who think only the fundamental mind and its seeds are real) - 207]

/ 6. Even the objects of direct perception, such as form and the like, are established by consensus and not by verifying cognition. That consensus is false, as is the general agreement that pure things are impure, for example.
7. The Protector taught things in order to bring people to understanding. [Qualm:] If these things are not ultimately, but only conventionally, momentary, this is inconsistent.

8. [Madhyamika:] There is no fault in the conventional truth of the contemplatives. In contrast to ordinary people, they see reality. Otherwise, ordinary people would invalidate the perception of women as impure.

9. [Qualm:] How can there possibly be merit due to the Jina (the Buddha) who is like an illusion, as is the case if he is truly existent? If a sentient being is like an illusion, why is he born again after he dies?

10. [Madhyamika:] Even an illusion lasts for as long as the collection of its conditions. Why should a sentient being truly exist merely because its continuum lasts a long time?

11. [Yogacarin:] If consciousness does not exist, there is no sin in killing an illusory person. [Madhyamika:] On the contrary, when one is endowed with the illusion of consciousness, vice and merit do arise.

12. [Yogacarin:] An illusory mind is not possible, since mantras and the like are unable to produce it. [Madhyamika:] Diverse illusions originate on account of diverse conditions. Nowhere does a single condition have the ability to produce everything.

13. [Yogacarin:] If one could be ultimately emancipated and yet transmigrate conventionally, then even the Buddha would transmigrate. So what would be the point of the Bodhisattva way of life?

14. [Madhyamika:] When its conditions are not destroyed, an illusion does not cease either. Due to a discontinuity of its conditions, it does not originate even conventionally.

15. [Yogacarin:] When even a mistaken cognition does not exist, by what is an illusion ascertained?

16. [Madhyamika:] If for you an illusion itself does not exist, what is apprehended? Even if it is an aspect of the mind itself, in reality it exists as something different.

17. [Yogacarin:] If the mind itself is an illusion, then what is perceived by what? [Madhyamika:] The Protector of the World stated that the mind does not perceive the mind. Just as a sword cannot cut itself, so it is with the mind.

18. [Yogacarin:] It illuminates itself, as does a lamp. [Madhyamika:] A lamp does not illuminate itself, for it is not concealed by darkness.
19. [Yogacarin:] A blue object does not require something else for its blueness, as does a crystal. So something may or may not occur in dependence on something else.

20. [Madhyamika:] As in the case of non-blueness, blue is not regarded as its own cause. What blue by itself could make itself blue?

21. [Yogacarin:] It is said that a lamp illuminates once this is cognized with awareness. The mind is said to illuminate once this is cognized with what?

22. [Madhyamika:] If no one perceives whether the mind is luminous or not, then there is no point in discussing it, like the beauty of a barren woman's daughter.

L5: [332.222.342.523 Refutation of the Chittamatin’s proofs for the existence of a self-cognizers - 211]

23. [Yogacarin:] If self-cognizing awareness does not exist, how is consciousness recalled?

24. [Madhyamika:] Recollection comes from its relation to something else that was experienced, like a rat's poison.

25. The manner in which something is seen, heard, or cognized is not what is refuted here, but the conceptualization of its true existence, which is the cause of suffering, is rejected here.

26. If you fancy that an illusion is neither different from the mind nor non-different, then if it is a really existing thing, how can it not be different? If it is not different, then it does not really exist.

27. Just as an illusion can be seen even though it does not truly exist, so it is with the observer, the mind.

28. [Madhyamika:] How can something that does not exist have any efficacy by being based on something real? You have approached the mind as being an isolated unity.

29. If the mind were free of any apprehended object, then all beings would be Tathagatas. Thus, what good is gained by speculating that only the mind exists?

30. [Yogacarin:] Even when the similarity to illusion is recognized, how does a mental affliction cease, since lust for an illusory woman arises even in the one who created her?

L5: [332.222.342.524 Refutation of the assertion that all imputed-existents must have as their basis something truly existent – 212 to 215]

31. [Madhyamika:] Because her creator’s imprints of mental afflictions toward objects of knowledge have not been eliminated, when seeing her, his imprint of emptiness is weak.
32. By building up the imprints of emptiness, the imprint of existence is diminished; and after accustoming oneself (habituation) to the fact that nothing truly exists, even that diminishes.

33. [Yogacarin:] If it is conceived that a phenomenon that does not really exist cannot be perceived, then how can a non-entity, which is without basis, stand before the mind?

34. [Madhyamika:] When neither an entity nor a non-entity remains before the mind, then since there is no other possibility, having no objects, it becomes calm.

35. Just as a wish-fulfilling gem or a wish-granting tree satisfies desires, so the image of the Jina (Buddha) is seen, because of his vow and his disciples.

36. When a charmer against poisons dies after completing a pillar, that pillar neutralizes poisons and the like, even a long time after his death.

37. Likewise, the pillar of the Jina, completed in accordance with the Bodhisattva way of life, accomplishes all tasks, even when the Bodhisattva has passed into nirvana.

38. [Hinayanist:] How could worship offered to something that has no consciousness be fruitful?
   [Madhyamika:] Because it is taught that it is the same whether he is present or has passed into nirvana.

39. According to the scriptures, effects of worship do exist, whether conventionally or ultimately, in the same way that worship offered to the true Buddha is said to be fruitful.

40. [Hinayanist:] Liberation comes from understanding the [Four Noble] Truths, so what is the point of perceiving emptiness?
   [Madhyamika:] Because a (Mahayana) scripture states that there is no Awakening without this path (the realization of emptiness).

41. [Hinayanist:] The Mahayana is certainly not authenticated.
   [Madhyamika:] How is your scripture authenticated?
   [Hinayanist:] Because it is authenticated by both of us.
   [Madhyamika:] Then it is not authenticated by you from the beginning.

42. Apply the same faith and respect to the Mahayana as you do to it. If something is true because it is accepted by two different parties, then the Vedas and the like would also be true.

43. If you object that the Mahayana is controversial, then reject your own scripture because it is contested by heterodox groups and because parts of your scriptures are contested by your own people and others.
44. The teaching has its root in the monkhood, and the monkhood is not on a firm footing. For those whose minds are subject to grasping, nirvana is not on a firm footing either.

45. If your objection is that liberation is due to the elimination of mental afflictions, then it should occur immediately afterward. Yet one can see the power of karma over those people, even though they had no mental afflictions.

46. If you think that as long as there is no craving there is no grasping onto rebirth, why could their craving, even though free of mental afflictions, not exist as delusion?

47. Craving has its cause in feeling, and they have feeling. The mind that has mental objects (dharma) has to dwell on one thing or another.

48. Without emptiness (of all dharma), the mind is constrained and arises again, as in non-cognitive meditative equipoise. Therefore, one should meditate on emptiness (of all dharma).

49. If you acknowledge the utterances that correspond to the sutras as the words of the Buddha, why do you not respect the Mahayana, which for the most part is similar to your sutras?

50. If the whole is faulty because one part is not acceptable, why not consider the whole as taught by the Jina because one part is similar to the sutras?

51. Who will not accept the teachings not fathomed by leaders such as Mahakasyapa, just because you have failed to understand them?

52. Remaining in the cycle of existence for the sake of those suffering due to delusion is achieved through freedom from attachment and fear. That is a fruit of emptiness.

53. Thus, no refutation is possible with regard to emptiness, so one should meditate on emptiness without hesitation.

54. Since emptiness is the antidote to the darkness of (both) afflictive and cognitive obscurations, how is it that one desiring omniscience does not promptly meditate on it?

55. Let fear arise toward something that produces suffering. Emptiness pacifies suffering. So why does fear of it arise?

56. If there were something called "I," fear could come from anywhere. If there is no "I," whose fear will there be?

57. Teeth, hair, and nails are not I, nor am I bone, blood, mucus, phlegm, pus, or lymph.

58. Bodily oil is not I, nor are sweat, fat, or entrails. The cavity of the entrails is not I, nor is excrement or urine.
59. Flesh is not I, nor are sinews, heat, or wind. Bodily apertures are not I, nor, in any way, are the six consciousnesses.

L4: [332.222.344.12 Refutation of the conceived object of the intellectually formed self-grasping of persons – 220 to 222]
L5: [332.222.344.121 Refutation of the permanent self postulated by the Samkhya School - 221]

60. If the awareness of sound were I, then sound would always be apprehended. But without an object of awareness, what does it cognize on account of which it is called awareness?

61. If that which is not cognizant were awareness, a piece of wood would be awareness. Therefore, it is certain there is no awareness in the absence of its object.

62. Why does that which cognizes form not hear it as well?

63. [Madhyamika:] How can something that is of the nature of the apprehension of sound be the apprehension of form? One person may be considered as a father and as a son, but not in terms of ultimate reality,

64. Since sattva, rajas, and tamas are neither a father nor a son. Moreover, its nature is not seen as related to the apprehension of sound.

65. If it is the same thing taking another guise, like an actor, he too is not permanent. If he has different natures, then this unity of his is unprecedented.

66. If another guise is not the true one, then describe its natural appearance. If it were the nature of awareness, then it would follow that all people would be identical.

67. That which has volition and that which has no volition would be identical, because their existence would be the same. If difference were false, then what would be the basis for similarity?

L5: [332.222.344.122 Refutation of the permanent self postulated by the Vaisheshika and Naiyayika schools - 222]

68. That which is not conscious is not "I," because it lacks consciousness, like a cloth and the like. If it were conscious because it has consciousness, then it would follow that when it stops being conscious of anything, it would vanish.

69. If the Self is not subject to change, what is the use of its consciousness? Thus, this implies that space, which lacks consciousness and activity, has a Self.

L4: [332.222.344.13 Refuting arguments concerning the above refutations - 223]

70. [Objection:] Without the Self, the relationship between an action and its result is not possible, for if the agent of an action has perished, who will have the result?

71. [Madhyamika:] When both of us have agreed that an action and its result have different bases and that the Self has no influence in this matter, then there is no point in arguing about this.
72. One who has the cause cannot possibly be seen as being endowed with the result. It is pointed out that the existence of the agent and the experiencer of the consequences depends on the unity of their continuum of consciousness.

73. The past or future mind is not "I," since it does not exist. If the present mind were "I," then when it had vanished, the "I" would not exist any more.

74. Just as the trunk of a plantain tree is nothing when cut into pieces, in the same way, the "I" is non-existent when sought analytically.

75. [Qualm:] If no sentient being exists, for whom is there compassion?
[Madhyamika:] For one who is imagined through delusion, which is accepted for the sake of the task.

76. [Qualm:] If there is no sentient being, whose is the task?
[Madhyamika:] True. The effort, too, is due to delusion. Nevertheless, in order to alleviate suffering, delusion with regard to one's task is not averted.

77. However, grasping onto the "I," which is a cause of suffering, increases because of the delusion with regard to the Self. If this is the unavoidable result of that, meditation on identitylessness is the best.

78. The body is not the feet, the calves, nor the thighs. Nor is the body the hips, the abdomen, the back, the chest, or the arms.

79. It is not the hands, the sides of the torso, or the armpits, nor is it characterized by the shoulders. Nor is the body the neck or the head. Then what here is the body?

80. If this body partially exists in all of these and its parts exist in their parts, where does it stand by itself?

81. If the body were located in its entirety in the hands and other limbs, there would be just as many bodies as there are hands and so forth.

82. The body is neither inside nor outside. How can the body be in the hands and other limbs? It is not separate from the hands and the like. How, then, can it be found at all?

83. Thus, the body does not exist (we cannot find it). However, on account of delusion, there is the impression of the body with regard to the hands and the like, because of their specific configuration, just as there is the impression of a person with regard to a pillar.

84. As long as a collection of conditions lasts, the body appears like a person. Likewise, as long as it lasts with regard to the hands and the like, the body continues to be seen in them.
L6: [332.222.344.211.2 Establishing the non-true existence of the limbs of the body - 228]

/ 85. In the same way (for the parts … we cannot find them), since it is an assemblage of toes, which one would be a foot? The same applies to a toe, since it is an assemblage of joints, and to a joint as well, because of its division into its own parts.

/ 86. Even the parts can be divided into atoms, and an atom itself can be divided according to its cardinal directions. The section of a cardinal direction is space, because it is without parts. Therefore, (even elementary particles like) an atom does not exist.

L6: [332.222.344.211.3 It is inappropriate to be attached to this dream-like, non-truly existent body - 229]

/ 87. What discerning person would be attached to form, which is just like a dream? Since the body does not exist (we cannot find it), then who is a woman and who is a man?

L6: [332.222.344.211.4 Thereby establishing the non-true existence of the person - 230]
L5: [332.222.344.212 Close placement of mindfulness on the feelings – 231 to 241]
L6: [332.222.344.212.1 Refuting the true existence of the nature of feeling – 232 to 235]
L7: [332.222.344.212.11 Refuting the true existence of painful feelings - 233]

/ 88. If suffering truly exists, why does it not oppress the joyful? If delicacies and the like are a pleasure, why do they not please someone struck by grief and so forth?

L7: [332.222.344.212.12 Refuting the true existence of pleasurable feelings - 234]

/ 89. If it is not experienced because it is overpowered by something more intense, how can that which is not of the nature of experience be a feeling?

/ 90. [Objection:] Surely there is suffering in its subtle state while its gross state is removed. [Madhyamika:] If it is simply another pleasure, then that subtle state is a subtle state of pleasure.

/ 91. If suffering does not arise when the conditions for its opposite have arisen, does it not follow that a "feeling" is a false notion created by conceptual fabrication?

L7: [332.222.344.212.13 Explaining the yoga necessary for meditating upon the non-true existence of feelings - 235]

/ 92. Therefore, this analysis is created as an antidote to that false notion. For the meditative stabilizations that arise from the field of investigations are the food of contemplatives.

L6: [332.222.344.212.2 Refuting the true existence of the cause of feeling – 236 to 239]
L7: [332.222.344.212.21 Refuting a truly existent meeting between the sense power and the object - 237]

/ 93. If there is an interval between a sense-faculty and its object, where is the contact between the two? If there is no interval, they would be identical. In that case, what would be in contact with what?
94. One atom cannot penetrate another, because it is without empty space and is of the same size as the other. When there is no penetration, there is no mingling; and when there is no mingling, there is no contact.

95. How, indeed, can there be contact with something that has no parts? If partlessness can be observed when there is contact, demonstrate this.

96. It is impossible for consciousness, which has no form, to have contact; nor is it possible for a composite, because it is not a truly existent thing, as investigated earlier.

97. Thus, when there is no (truly existing) contact, how can (resulting) feeling arise? What is the reason for this exertion? Who could be harmed by what?

98. If there is no one to experience feeling and if feeling does not exist, then after understanding this situation, why, O craving, are you not shattered?

99. The mind that has a dreamlike and illusion-like nature sees and touches. Since feeling arises together with the mind, it is not perceived by the mind.

100. What happens earlier is remembered but not experienced by what arises later. It does not experience itself, nor is it experienced by something else.

101. There is no one who experiences feeling. Hence, in reality, there is no feeling. Thus, in this identityless bundle, who can be hurt by it?
105. If it arises after the object of cognition, from what would cognition arise? In this way it is ascertained that no phenomenon comes into existence.

106. [Objection:] If conventional truth does not exist, how can there be the two truths? If it does exist due to another conventional truth, how can there be a liberated sentient being?

107. [Madhyamika:] One is an ideation of someone else’s mind, and one does not exist by one’s own conventional truth. After something has been ascertained, it exists; if not, it does not exist as a conventional reality either.

108. The two, conception and the conceived, are mutually dependent, just as every analysis is expressed by referring to what is commonly known.

109. [Objection:] But if one analyzes by means of analysis which itself is analyzed, then there is an infinite regress, because that analysis can also be analyzed.

110. [Madhyamika:] When the object of analysis is analyzed, no basis for analysis is left. Since there is no basis, it does not arise, and that is called "nirvana."

111. A person for whom these two are truly existent is in an extremely shaky position. If an object exists because of the power of cognition, how does one arrive at the true existence of cognition?

112. If cognition exists because of the power of the object of cognition, how does one arrive at the true existence of the object of cognition? If their existence is due to their mutual power, neither can exist.

113. [Objection:] If there is no father without a son, how can there be a son?

114. [Objection:] A sprout arises from a seed. The seed is indicated by that sprout. Why does cognition that arises from the object of cognition not ascertain the true existence of that object of cognition?

115. [Madhyamika:] It is ascertained that a seed exists owing to a cognition that is not the same as a sprout. How is the existence of a cognition cognized, since the object of cognition is ascertained by that cognition?

116. People observe every cause through direct perception, since the components of a lotus, such as the stalk and so forth, are produced by a variety of causes.

117. [Qualm:] What makes the variety of causes?

118. [Madhyamika:] A preceding variety of causes.
How can a cause give an effect?

Because of the power of preceding causes.

118. [Nyaya-Vaisesika:] Isvara is the cause of the world.

[Madhyamika:] Then explain who Isvara is. If he is the elements, so be it; but then why the tussle over a mere name?

119. Moreover, the earth and other elements are not one; they are impermanent, inactive, and not divine. They can be stepped on and are impure. That is not Isvara.

120. Space is not the Lord because it is inactive. Nor is it the Self, because that has been refuted. How can the inconceivable creatorship of the Inconceivable One be described?

121. What does he desire to create? If he desires to create a Self, are not that Self, the nature of the earth and other elements, and Isvara eternal? Cognition is due to the object of cognition and is without beginning.

122. Happiness and suffering are the result of action. Say then, what did he create? If the cause has no beginning, how can its effect have a beginning?

123. If he does not depend on anything else, why does he not always create? There is nothing whatsoever that is not created by him, so on what would he depend?

124. If Isvara depends on a collection of conditions, then again, he is not the cause. He cannot refrain from creating when there is a collection of conditions, nor can he create in their absence.

125. If Isvara creates without desiring to do so, it would follow that he is dependent on something other than himself. Even if he desires to create, he is dependent on that desire. Whence is the supremacy of the creator?

126. Those who claim that atoms are permanent have been refuted earlier. The Samkhyas consider a primal substance as the permanent cause of the world.

The universal constituents—sattva, rajas, and tamas—remaining in equilibrium, are called the primal substance. The universe is explained by their disequilibrium.

It is implausible that a single thing has three natures, so it does not exist. Likewise, the universal constituents do not exist, since they would each be comprised of three constituents.
129. In the absence of the three universal constituents, the existence of sound and other sense-objects is far-fetched. There is also no possibility of pleasure and the like in unconscious things such as cloth and so on.

130. If you argue that things have the nature of causes, have things not been analyzed away? For you, pleasure and the like are the cause, but cloth and the like are not a result of that cause.

131. Happiness and other feelings may be due to things such as a cloth, but in their absence, there would be no happiness and so on. The permanence of happiness and other feelings is never ascertained.

132. If the manifestation of happiness truly exists, why is the feeling not apprehended? If you say that it becomes subtle, how can it be gross and subtle?

133. [Objection:] It is subtle upon leaving its gross state. Its grossness and subtlety are impermanent.
   [Madhyamika:] Why do you not consider everything as impermanent in that way?

134. If its gross state is not different from happiness, then the impermanence of happiness is obvious. If you think that something non-existent does not arise because it has no existence whatsoever, then you have accepted, even against your will, the origination of something manifest that was non-existent.

135. If you accept that the effect is present in the cause, then one who eats food would be eating excrement, and a cotton-tree seed would be bought at the price of a cloth and worn as a garment.

136. If you argue that ordinary people do not see this because of delusion, this is the case even for one who knows reality.

137. Even ordinary people know that. Why do they not see it? If you argue that ordinary people have no verifying cognition, then even their perception of something manifest is false.

138. [Samkhya:] If verifying cognition is not verifying cognition, then is that not verified falsely? In reality, the emptiness of phenomena is not ascertained through that verifying cognition.

139. [Madhyamika:] Without detecting an imagined thing, its non-existence is not apprehended. Therefore, if a thing is false, its non-existence is clearly false.

140. Thus, when in a dream a son has died, the thought "He does not exist" prevents the arising of the thought of his existence; and that too is false.
Therefore, with this analysis, nothing exists without a cause, nor is it contained in its individual or combined causal conditions.

Nothing comes from something else, nothing remains, and nothing departs. What is the difference between an illusion and that which is considered by fools as real?

Examine this: As for that which is created by illusion and that which is created by causes, where do they come from and where do they go?

How can there be true existence in something artificial, like a reflection, which is perceived only in conjunction with something else and not in its absence?

For something that already exists, what need is there for a cause? If something does not exist, what is the need for a cause?

Something that does not exist will not be subject to change, even with millions of causes. How can something in that state be existent? What else can come into existence?

If there is no existent thing at the time of non-existence, when will an existent thing come into existence? For that non-existent thing will not disappear as long as the existent thing is not produced.

When a non-existent thing has not disappeared, there is no opportunity for the existent thing. An existent thing does not become non-existent, since it would follow that it would be of two natures.

Thus, there is neither cessation nor coming into existence at any time. Therefore, this entire world does not arise or cease.

States of existence are like dreams; upon analysis, they are similar to plantain trees. In reality, there is no difference between those who have attained nirvana and those who have not.
151. When all phenomena are empty in this way, what can be gained and what can be lost? Who will be honored or despised by whom?

152. Whence comes happiness or suffering? What is pleasant and what is unpleasant? When investigated in its own nature, what is craving and for what is that craving?

153. Upon investigation, what is the world of living beings, and who will really die here? Who will come into existence, and who has come into existence? Who is a relative, and who is a friend of whom?

154. May those who are like me apprehend everything as being like space. They rage and rejoice by means of dispute and jubilation.

155. Seeking their own happiness with evil deeds, they live miserably with grief, troubles, despair, and cutting and stabbing each other.

156. After repeatedly entering the fortunate states of existence and becoming accustomed to pleasure again and again, they die and fall into the miserable states of existence in which there is long and intense anguish.

157. There are many pitfalls in mundane existence, but there is not this truth there. There is mutual incompatibility. Reality could not be like this.

158. There are incomparable, violent, and boundless oceans of suffering. Strength is scanty there; and the life span is short there as well.

159. There, too, in practices for long life and health, in hunger, fatigue, and weariness, in sleep and calamities, and in unprofitable associations with fools,

160. Life passes by swiftly and in vain. Discrimination is difficult to obtain there. How could there be a way to prevent habitual distractions?

161. There, too, Mara tries to throw them into very wretched states. There, because of the abundance of wrong paths, doubt is difficult to overcome,
Thus, oneself and others are afflicted by the sufferings of cyclic existence and it is appropriate to feel sorrow.

And leisure is hard to obtain again. The appearance of a Buddha is extremely rare. The flood of mental afflictions is difficult to impede. Alas, what a succession of suffering!

Ah, there should be great pity for those adrift in the flood of suffering, who, although miserable in this way, do not recognize their wretched situation.

Just like one who repeatedly immerses himself in water but must enter fire again and again, so they consider themselves fortunate, although they are extremely miserable.

As they live like this, pretending that they are not subject to aging and death, terrible calamities come, with death the foremost of them.

Thus, when might I bring relief to those tormented by the fire of suffering, with the requisites of happiness springing forth from the clouds of my merit?

When shall I respectfully teach emptiness (wisdom) and the accumulation of merit (method) — in terms of (the two truths:) conventional truth and without reification (emptiness) — to those whose views are reified?
L1: [CHAPTER X – Dedication]

[Dedication -- / 1 – giving & dedication of merit]

[332.222.4 Dedication and the practice of giving for the benefit of all beings – 276 to 191]

---

L2: [332.222.41 Explanation of the brief dedication - 277]

1. May all sentient beings be graced with the Bodhisattva way of life by the virtue I have obtained while reflecting on A Guide to the Bodhisattva Way of Life.

---

L2: [332.222.42 Explanation of the extensive dedication – 278 to 190]

L3: [332.222.421 Dedication for the sake of others – 279 to 288]

L4: [332.222.421.1 Dedication to alleviate the sickness of others - 280]

2. Through my merit, may all those in all directions who are afflicted by bodily and mental sufferings obtain oceans of joy and contentment.

---

L4: [332.222.421.2 Dedication to pacify the suffering of the three lower realms - 281]

3. As long as the cycle of existence lasts, may their happiness never decline. May the world attain the constant joy of the Bodhisattvas.

---

4. As many hells as there are in the worlds, may beings in them delight in the joys of contentment in Sukhavati.

---

5. May those afflicted with cold find warmth. May those oppressed with heat be cooled by oceans of water springing from the great clouds of the Bodhisattvas.

---

6. May the forest of sword-leaves become for them the splendor of a pleasure-grove; and may the swordlike Salmali trees grow as wish-fulfilling trees.

---

7. May the regions of hell become vast ponds of delight, fragrant with lotuses, beautiful and pleasing with the cries of white geese, wild ducks, ruddy geese, and swans.

---

8. May the heap of burning coal become a mound of jewels. May the burning ground become a crystal marble floor; and may the mountains of "the crushing hell" become temples of worship filled with Sugatas.

---

9. May the rain of burning coal, lava, and daggers from now on become a rain of flowers; and may mutual battling with weapons now become a playful flower-fight.

---

10. By the power of my virtue, may those whose flesh has completely fallen off, whose skeletons are of the color of a white jasmine flower, and who are immersed in the river Vaitarani whose water is like fire, attain celestial bodies and dwell with goddesses by the river Mandakini.

---

11. May the horrifying agents of Yama, crows, and vultures suddenly watch here in fear. Those looking upward behold blazing Vajrapani in the sky and wonder: "Whose is this brilliant light that dispels darkness all around and generates the joy of contentment?” May they depart together with him, freed of vice through the power of their joy.

12. A rain of lotuses falls mixed with fragrant waters. It is seen to extinguish the unceasing fires of the hells. May the beings of the hells, suddenly refreshed with joy, wonder, What is this? and may they see Padmapani.

13. Friends, come, come quickly! Cast away fear! We are alive! A radiant vanquisher of fear, a certain prince in a monastic robe, has come to us. By his power every adversity is removed, streams of delight flow, the Spirit of Awakening is born, as is compassion, the mother of protection of all beings.

14. Behold him whose lotus-feet are worshiped with tiaras of hundreds of gods, whose eyes are moist with compassion, on whose head a stream of diverse flowers rains down, with his delightful summer palaces celebrated by thousands of goddesses singing hymns of praise. Upon seeing Manjughosa before them, may the beings of the hells immediately cheer.

15. Through my virtues, may the beings of the hells rejoice upon seeing the unobscured clouds of Bodhisattvas, headed by Samantabhadra and bearing pleasant, cool, and fragrant rains and breezes.

16. May the intense pains and fears of the beings of the hells be pacified. May the inhabitants of all miserable states of existence be liberated from their woeful states.

17. May the animals’ risk of being eaten by each other disappear. May the pretas be as happy as the people in Uttarakuru.

18. Through my virtues, may the beings of the hells rejoice upon seeing the unobscured clouds of Bodhisattvas, headed by Samantabhadra and bearing pleasant, cool, and fragrant rains and breezes.

19. May the blind always see forms, and may the deaf hear. May pregnant women give birth without pains, as did Mayadevi.

20. May they acquire everything that is beneficial and desired by the mind: clothing, food, drink, flower garlands, sandal-paste, and ornaments.

21. May the fearful become fearless and those struck by grief find joy. May the despondent become resolute and free of trepidation.

22. May the ill have good health. May they be freed from every bondage. May the weak become strong and have affectionate hearts for one another.

23. May all regions be advantageous to all those who travel on roads. May the purpose for which they set out be expediently accomplished.

24. May those who journey by boat succeed as they desire. May they safely reach the shore and rejoice with their relatives.
25. May those who find themselves on wrong paths in dreary forests come upon the company of fellow travelers; and without fatigue, may they journey without fear of bandits, tigers, and the like.

26. May deities protect the dull, the insane, the deranged, the helpless, the young, and the elderly, and those in danger from sickness, the wilderness, and so on.

27. May they be free from all lack of leisure; may they be endowed with faith, wisdom, and compassion; may they be possessed of stature and good conduct; and may they always remember their former lives.

28. May they be inexhaustible treasuries just like Sky-treasure. Free of conflict or irritation, may they have an independent way of life.

29. May beings who have little splendor be endowed with great magnificence. May unattractive wretches be endowed with beauty.

30. May the women in the world become men. May the lowly obtain grandeur and yet be free of arrogance.

31. Through this merit of mine, may all beings without exception abstain from every vice and always engage in virtue.

32. Not lacking the Spirit of Awakening, devoted to the Bodhisattva way of life, embraced by the Buddhas, and free of the deeds of Maras,

33. May all beings have immeasurable life spans. May they always live happily, and may even the word "death" disappear.

34. May all quarters of the world be delightful with gardens of wish-fulfilling trees, filled with the Buddhas and the Children of the Buddhas, and be enchanting with the sounds of Dharma.

35. May the ground everywhere be free from stones and rocks, smooth like the palm of the hand, soft and made of lapis lazuli.

36. May the great assemblies of Bodhisattvas sit on all sides. May they beautify the earth with their own resplendence.

37. May all beings unceasingly hear the sound of Dharma from the birds, from every tree, from the rays of light, and from the sky.

38. May they always encounter the Buddhas and the Children of the Buddhas. May they worship the Spiritual Mentor of the World with endless clouds of offerings.

39. May a god send rain in time, and may there be an abundance of crops. May the populace be prosperous, and may the king be righteous.

40. May medicines be effective, and may the mantras of those who recite them be successful. May dakinis, raksasas, and other ghouls be filled with compassion.
41. May no sentient being be unhappy, sinful, ill, neglected, or despised; and may no one be despondent.

42. May monasteries be well established, full of chanting and study. May there always be harmony among the Sangha, and may the purpose of the Sangha be accomplished.

43. May monks who wish to practice find solitude. May they meditate with their minds agile and free of all distractions.

44. May nuns receive provisions and be free of quarrels and troubles. May all renunciates be of untarnished ethical discipline.

45. May those who are of poor ethical discipline be disgusted and become constantly intent on the extinction of their vices. May they reach a fortunate state of existence, and may their vows remain unbroken there.

46. May they be learned and cultured, receive alms, and have provisions. May their mind-streams be pure and their fame be proclaimed in every direction.

47. Without experiencing the suffering of the miserable states of existence and without arduous practice, may the world attain Buddhahood in a single divine body.

48. May all sentient beings worship all the Buddhas in many ways. May they be exceedingly joyful with the inconceivable bliss of the Buddhas.

49. May the Bodhisattvas' wishes for the welfare of the world be fulfilled; and whatever the Protectors intend for sentient beings, may that be accomplished.

50. May the Pratyekabuddhas and Sravakas be happy, always worshiped by the lofty gods, asuras, and humans.

51. Through the grace of Manjughosa, may I always achieve ordination and the recollection of past lives until I reach the Joyous Ground.

52. May I live endowed with strength in whatever posture I am. In all my lives may I find plentiful places of solitude.

53. When I wish to see or ask something, may I see the Protector Manjunatha himself, without any impediment.

54. May my way of life be like that of Manjusri, who lives to accomplish the benefit of all sentient beings throughout the ten directions.
55. For as long as space endures and for as long as the world lasts, may I live dispelling the miseries of the world.

56. Whatever suffering there is for the world, may it all ripen upon me. May the world find happiness through all the virtues of the Bodhisattvas.

57. May the teaching that is the sole medicine for the suffering of the world and the source of all prosperity and joy remain for a long time, accompanied by riches and honor.

58. I bow to Manjughosa, through whose grace my mind turns to virtue. I salute my spiritual friend through whose kindness it becomes stronger.

L3: [332.222.423 Dedication for the flourishing of the buddhadharma, the source of all happiness - 290]

L2: [332.222.43 Recollecting kindness and prostrating - 291]
[End]